LIVED IN MOSCOW BEFORE THE WAR

Dr. James L. Thompson, Age 80
Years, Eminent Oculist, Dead in Indianapolis, Once Lived Here.

PLIED TRADE AS A COBBLER

In Early Days Man Needed Trade as Well as Profession—Born in England.

Dr. James Livingstone Thompson, eighty-two years old, probably the most eminent ocular specialist in Indiana who died at his home in Indianapolis yesterday, lived in Moscow for many years before the civil war and plied his trade as a cobbler. He is remembered by many Rushville and Rush county men.

Dr. Thompson has been in failing health for five years. His decline began when his hip was broken from a fall. The immediate cause of his demise was pneumonia.

Dr. Thompson was a typical village cobbler, according to stories told by his friends. He was generally known as "Doc." in Moscow and vicinity in those days. He had a right to the title since he had been graduated from Rush Medical college at Chicago. But in those days the practice was not very heavy and he worked as a cobbler to make his "pin" money.

Dr. Thompson was a great huntsman as well as cobbler and village physician in the early days around Moscow. When business was slack in either trade or profession, men here who remember him say, he would spend a day at a time in the fields in search of game.

He came to be a marksman of some ability. One day, so a story still remembered by Rushville men runs, Dr. Thompson was sitting in the door of his shop peering vigilantly on bad soles when an Italian, carrying a miniature wax statue of a man, came into his range of vision. Dr. Thompson arose quietly, took his trusty musket from the wall, and with one shot cut the statue off the board on which the Italian was carrying it. Then he resumed his work as if nothing had occurred.

Dr. Thompson was born in London, England, October 5, 1832, and attended private schools there. He came to this country in 1856 and after a journey on foot through Minnesota and other parts of what was then regarded as the far northwest, began the study of medicine at St. Paul. Later he studied in Chicago and was graduated from Rush Medical college in 1860.

At the outbreak of the civil war, he enlisted in the United States army. He was assistant surgeon from May, 1863, to February, 1864; was major and surgeon in the United States artillery, 1864 to 1865; surgeon-in-chief at Post Columbus, Kentucky, and medical director for the district of western Kentucky until October, 1865, when he resigned. He then began the general practice of medicine at Harrison, O., where he continued for two years. From there he went to Cincinnati, where for two years he was assistant to Dr. Williams, famous as an oculist. In 1873 Dr. Thompson removed to Indianapolis, where for forty years he made a specialty of the treatment of diseases of the eye and achieved a reputation that brought to him patients from all over the United States.

Dr. Thompson was a member of the Indianapolis Literary Society, of which he was president in 1893-94, had been president of the Marion County Medical Society, was a member of the Patriotic Order of the Loyal Legion and a member of the Meridian Street M. E. church.

Though British born, he was thoroughly American. Some years ago, when a movement was on foot to buy a silver plate service for the battleship Indiana he came to the front with a large subscription. Then, thinking that the project was not going forward rapidly enough he gave another subscription, and was ready with a third had his friends not persuaded him to give others a chance. He was an ardent believer in a big navy and rejoiced exceedingly every time the congress made an appropriation for dreadnoughts.

Dr. Thompson is survived by a daughter, Mrs. John H. Oliver, and her two children, and by two children of his son, the late Dr. Dan A. Thompson, James L. Thompson, Jr., and Martha Thompson; also by a sister, Mrs. E. H. Bergh of Chicago.

QUESTION ABOUT BUILDING ROADS

Deputy Auditor Says Graham Highway Would Put Township Above
Bonded Indebtedness Limit.

COUNTY ATTORNEY DISPUTES IT

Charles Bales, deputy auditor, and John Kiplinger, county attorney, expected to do some figuring this afternoon to determine whether the Bruce Graham tarbound road, the contract for which was let Tuesday, could be started before May. The deputy auditor has already done a little figuring, and he contends that the building of the Graham road and the paving of Perkins and adjacent parts of Sixth, Seventh and Eighth streets will put Rushville township eight thousand dollars above the bonded indebtedness limit for road building. The county attorney says the building of the two roads will not exceed the limit as provided by law.

If the deputy auditor is right in his contention, it means that the building of the Graham road can not be started until some time in May. By that time Rush county will have received its share of the spring installment of taxes and the replenishing of the treasury will make the building of the road possible.

JURY OBTAINED IN DAMAGE SUIT

But Case of Dorothy Taylor Against Traction Terminal Co., For $25,- 000 is Settled Soon Afterwards.

OPENING ARGUMENT MADE

The first opening argument in the $25,000 damage suit of Mrs. Dorothy Taylor of the Indianapolis against the Indianapolis Traction Terminal company was made this afternoon by the plaintiff's attorney and the defense began when a settlement was made. The case was called this morning and it was late in getting started due to early efforts to compromise. The sum involved was not learned. The greater part of the day was used in securing the jury.

Mrs. Taylor, the plaintiff in the suit, claims to have been injured when a Lexington avenue car crashed into a Virginia avenue car on which she was riding. Mrs. Taylor was not able to be in court on account of her condition. The case promised to be a hard fought legal battle.

OILING BILL IS UP TO GOVERNOR

Senator Cary Jackson's Measure
Which Has Special Application
Here is Passed by House.

MANY BILLS ARE MADE LAWS

Term of Present County Superintendents Extended Two Years—
Prosecutors Must Appear

Senator Cary Jackson's bill giving cities the power to authorize a tax levy for sprinkling and oiling the streets and for making other improvements was passed by the lower house of the Indiana general assembly yesterday. The bill is now ready for the Governor's signature, it having passed the senate recently.

The bill has special application here because Rushville has had difficulty in keeping the dust down in the summertime because of the scarcity of water. Some residents have oiled their streets in the summer and others have not. The new law will give the city the power to do this, and the question that has agitated Rushville for several summers will be settled.

Governor Ralston signed the bill introduced by Representative Ensie, providing for the extension of the terms of all the county superintendents in the state for two years. The measures provides that county superintendents shall be elected in June, 1917, and take office in August, thus increasing the present officials' term two years. The bill caused much adverse criticism in both houses, but an organization of school people succeeded in pushing the measure through.

The Governor signed the Ratts bill, providing for the cleaning of milk, cream and ice cream containers, as soon as they are emptied.

Governor Ralston has signed the Grube bill, which provides for the appearance of prosecuting attorneys in divorce cases, where no other appearance of counsel is made.

The bill requires the judges of courts wherein divorce cases are pending to notify the prosecuting attorneys to appear in behalf of the state to fight for the defense in the case. The prosecuting attorneys are to be paid $5 by the plaintiff in each case, and unless such payments is made within twenty days from the time of the filing of the divorce, the petition for divorce proceedings is to be stricken from the docket. The bill carries an emergency clause and is now in effect.

The Sullivan bill, giving interested parties in drainage proceedings the right to go into court, if possible, that the drain, if enlarged or extended, will still be insufficient also was signed by the Governor in case the court finds that the extension or enlargement proposed will be sufficient for the drainage of the land it is intended to drain, then the right of remonstrance against the drainage extension is denied the interested parties.

The Statesburg bill, providing that independent newspaper may get legal advertising when there are no papers of the two leading political parties, was another bill signed by the Governor. The W. W. Spencer house bill, establishing a uniform law for negotiable instruments, also was signed.

Vern Norris will hold a public sale at his farm northeast of the city tomorrow. The sale will be held under a tent rain or shine.

TOM J. GERAGHTY ARRIVES EN REEL

Former Rushville Newspaper Man
Reaches Here in Motion Picture
Without Injury.

REPUBLICAN CLOSING UP SHOP

Our Hero Adopts Violent Methods
And Becomes Affluent After Many Trying Experiences.

Tom J. Geraghty of New York City arrived, en reel, this morning at 7:50 o'clock via Adams express and at 8:37 o'clock the Daily Republican had shut up shop and seventeen of the forces were at the Princess theater acting as censors for the motion picture in which the former Rushville newspaper man had the title role.

The motion picture, entitled, "The Making of a Reporter, or The Wages of Sin," was made by the Vitaphone company for the New York Herald newspaper staff's annual banquet, and men employed in the paper take all the parts. The picture was shown at the banquet last Saturday night, and after a few times run at the Herald Square theatre for the benefit of the Herald "family," it was rushed out here by special request of Mr. Geraghty so that his old friends could see him in action.

The picture will be released on the regular Vitaphone circuit and will likely be shown in many parts of the United States. Since the whole story centers about Tom, who is the country reporter, the reel leads off with "Thomas J. Geraghty from Rushville, Ind."

The picture opens with Tom leaving the Pennsylvania terminal, dressed in tight black trousers, a white short, close-fitting coat, plaid vest and small black stiff hat with the railroad identification ticket still sticking in the band. Tom got a laugh from his Rushville friends after the first few feet by the characteristic movement of rubbing his hand across his mouth. Just as natural as life, yes sir!

Tom proceeds to Broadway, looking at his dollar watch which is attached with a strap watchchain and packing his keister in true rube fashion, when he is accosted by a regular New York newspaper reporter. The reporter gets acquainted and steers him into a cafe. They have a little drink together. The reporter attempts to make a getaway, leaving our hero, who has just arrived from interior Indiana, with the bill to pay.

But Tom, guileless as he looks, refuses to "fall for" the "gag" and gives chase, the waiter at their heels. The three run to the Herald office, with the hoi polloi following, and an accounting finally has to be made when Tom catches the reporter and the waiter catches them both in the reporters' room.

The regular reporter recedes the Hoosier rube has enough sticktoitiveness in his make-up to make a good reporter and determines to reveal to the country gentleman the ways, the whims, ay, even the most intimate view of the life in newspaperdom.

Tom is led to the front of the Herald office and is shown the staff as "it" goes to work. The common reporters are pictured with eyeglasses, sleek plug hats, fur-collared overcoats, evening clothes and walking sticks. They rode to the office in taxicabs and ate at the Waldorf Astoria. Tom narrowly misses being run over every time a taxi pulls up at the office. The chief editors, as they appear in the picture, look like tramps, walk to the office and eat "hotomollie" sandwiches at a portable lunch stand on the street corner.

Our hero does not take kindly to the newspaper game, but he consents to a trial after the beauties of it are depicted. He insists on holding his typewriter in his lap as he writes he drapes the top of the machine with his hat. The sedate managing editor goes into convulsions and wads up and tramples the yokel's first "story."

Our hero's finances run low. He attempts to make a touch off the city editor who repulses him. Driven to dire straits, he holds up the cartoonist with a shotgun and lifts all the money and valuables the man has. Suffice to say, he finds the violent methods finally bring him to affluence.

The picture will be shown at the Princess theater some time next week, announcement of which will be made later.

WINDSOR HOTEL OWNER EXPIRES

V. C. Brown, Age 63, Dies in Indianapolis Sanatorium of Heart Trouble and Brights' Disease.

WIDOW AND SON SURVIVORS

V. C. Brown, proprietor of the Windsor hotel, age sixty-three years, died at Fletcher's sanatorium in Indianapolis last night after a long illness. He has been afflicted with heart trouble and Brights' disease for several months. His decline in health began last Thanksgiving day and he has been steadily growing worse since then.

Mr. Brown came here from Greensburg and took charge of the Windsor hotel about a year ago. Previous to that he had been proprietor of a Greensburg hotel for five years. Mr. Brown was a native of Michigan and located in Greensburg after a long residence at Coldwater, Mich. He was an experienced hotel man, having been engaged in the business all his life.

He is survived by a widow, who was his second wife, and a son, S. C. L. Brown who runs a hotel in Lone, Michigan. The body will be taken to a small town in Michigan for burial.

DIES AT MUNCIE.

Mrs. Robert Dunn, age seventy-five years, formerly of this city, died at her home in Muncie this morning. She was formerly Miss Eleanor Bodine and was a sister of William Bodine of Morristown. The body will be brought here Saturday for burial.

IS NO BONUS OR WATERED STOCK

Ideal Husker Company Wants to Sell
Fourth of Capitalization in Rush County.

$200,000 IS ALREADY ISSUED

Remaining $100,000 Will be Held in Reserve For Future Development
—Estimate of Earnings.

There is no preferred bonus or watered stock in the Ideal Husker company, a concern conceived by local men to manufacture a corn husking machine invented, perfected and patented by Rushville men. Stock salesmen are now in the field and hope to dispose of a hundred thousand dollars worth in this country.

The new concern has expressed its desire to locate in Rushville. It will ask no bonus. It will not ask for a lot sale to get a factory site. All that it asks is that the people of Rush county invest a hundred thousand dollars in what appears to be an invention that will revolutionize the farming industry.

The company was capitalized at $400,000. Half of the capitalization has been issued in stock to the organizers who are behind the men that perfected the invention after years of hard study and labor.

The second issue of stock was for a hundred thousand dollars and salesmen for the United States Realty company of Indianapolis are now attempting to dispose of that in this county. The county has been divided into four districts and a salesman assigned to each district. Under the plan the salesmen hope to dispose of the stock in sixty days, with the co-operation of Rushville people. The officers of the company are serving without salary and no money is being expended in any way. The other hundred thousand dollar stock issue will not be made except to be used in developing the company later.

It is estimated that the earning power of the plant, as soon as it is putting out corn huskers at the rate of fifteen hundred a year, which it is expected will be done the first year, will be at least fifty thousand dollars a year. Figuring on the basis of the total capitalization, the dividends would be twelve and a half per cent. This is a conservative estimate because the dividends would be paid only on the stock issued.

This, it is pointed out, would make the stock worth more than par at the very outset. In reality the stock

DR. FRIEDMANN GETS BACKSET IN GOTHAM

Health Board Refuses to Take Him Seriously.

New York, March 6.—Dr. Friedmann's request for an opportunity to demonstrate his treatment for tuberculosis in a hospital controlled by the board of health has been turned down. It remains to be seen whether any private incorporated hospital lets him in, in the face of this official refusal. If not, he apparently must go away from this city in order to give his remedy the test which he professes to desire.

Dr. Lederle, chairman of the board of health, would not say what reasoning was back of this pronouncement. The advisory board, he observed, simply did not "think a clinical test expedient at this time."

The Waldorf gave warning to Dr. Friedmann that if he wanted to make doctor's offices out of his rooms in the hotel in which he might receive tuberculosis patients he would have to look elsewhere for accommodations. Dr. Friedmann and his retinue took the hint, packed up his cultures and trunks and left.

DEADLY NAVAL MANEUVERS

German Cruiser Sends a Destroyer to the Bottom.

Heligoland, Germany March 6.—Two officers and sixty-eight of the crew of the German torpedo boat destroyer "S 178" were drowned when the vessel was rammed by the cruiser York during maneuvers in the North sea. Among the dead are the commander of the destroyer, Lieutenant Koch, and his first officer. The surgeon and engineer and fifteen men of the crew were saved. The destroyer sank immediately.

Robbers Crack Postoffice Safe.
Orleans, Ind., March 6.—Robbers broke into the postoffice here and blew the safe open, but were frightened away before obtaining any loot. The explosion of the safe was heard by Dr. W. H. Patton, residing near by, and he fired a shotgun, causing the robbers to flee. The safe was badly damaged.

HOUSE PASSES GARNISHEE BILL

Much Confusion Marked the Vote On It.

FLOOR LEADER AGAINST IT

In Casting a Negative Vote Mr. Spencer Characterized the Measure as "Infamous" and as an "Outrage," and Charged That Members of Grocers' Organization Had "Browbeaten Members of the Legislature."

Indianapolis, March 6.—The approval of the house has been given to the Weidner garnishee bill, the passage of which several Democratic representatives predicted will cause their party's defeat at the next election, the vote being 52 to 43. The bill now goes to the senate for final action.

The measure has caused more heated argument and has engendered more bitterness than any other measure introduced in the present legislature. The house was in a turmoil during the debate which preceded the vote. Floor Leader Spencer, in casting a negative vote, characterized the bill as "infamous" and as an "outrage." He charged that members of the grocers' organization, which has promoted an extensive campaign for such legislation, had "browbeaten members of the legislature."

Most of the afternoon session yesterday was occupied with debates on the Koenig workmen's compensation bill, which was passed by a vote of 77 to 20, and the garnishee measure.

Among the measures passed at the morning session were the Grube senate bill to add two years to the term of Thomas W. Brolley, state statistician, and the Gets trading stamp bill.

The compensation law, drafted by representatives of the Indiana Federation of Labor and the Indiana Manufacturers' and Shippers' association, provides for the establishment of a state liability board of awards consisting of three members. A state insurance fund, to which employers may contribute voluntarily, would be created. The board would have for its duty the settlement of personal injury claims, the compensation being based on a sliding scale of awards, the highest being $3,400, provided for in the bill.

Women's Working Conditions.

The appointment of a commission by the governor for the purpose of investigating labor conditions and working hours of women was indorsed by the senate through its passage of a bill providing for such a commission. This bill was passed immediately after it was introduced by Senator Grube, who had championed the bill for a fifty-hour working week for women in the senate the day before and lost.

"Some of the senators voted against the bill because they thought it was not scientific," said Senator Grube. "Here is an opportunity to get a scientific bill. The commission will have an opportunity to make a thorough study of labor conditions among women and to make recommendations for legislation which will be thoroughly scientific."

The commission is to be composed of five members, one of whom must be an employer, one an employee and one a woman. It is to hold hearings in at least ten different localities, and it will have the power to examine witnesses, visit factories and obtain any information it needs. An appropriation of $2,000 is provided for the expenses, but the members of the commission are to serve without salary.

WITHOUT ANY KNOWN CAUSE

Indianapolis Man Kills Young Woman and Shoots Himself.

Indianapolis, March 6.—Ben Weiss, twenty-six years old, employed at a glass works, shot and killed Ethel Finley, twenty-five years old, at the home of his brother, Claude Weiss. After firing the fatal shot Weiss turned his revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his body just above the heart. He is dying at the city hospital.

The cause of the murder and attempted suicide is unknown to the police. Miss Finley, a niece of Mrs. Claude Weiss, was on a visit here from Tarentum, Pa., her home. She had packed her clothing preparatory to returning home today. Relatives denied that Weiss and Miss Finley had ever been lovers or that there had been undue intimacy between them. There was, they declared, no reason for the tragedy.

Death Spares County a Trial.

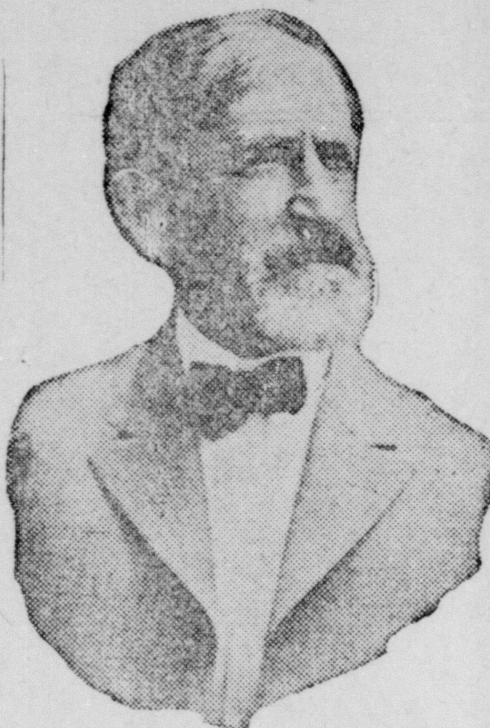

Jeffersonville, Ind., March 6.—Dallas Bower, aged twenty-five, whose trial was set for March 14, on the charge of killing his stepmother, Mrs. Eliza Bower, aged forty-five, Nov. 10, 1912, is dead in the Clark county jail of dropsy and heart disease. He killed his stepmother with an ax. The only cause was an aversion for his father's fourth wife.

Another Respite For the Allens.

Richmond, Va., March 6.—Governor Mann has granted a respite until March 28 to Floyd Allen and his son, Claude Swanson Allen, under sentence to die in the electric chair at the state penitentiary on Friday next for their part in the Hillsville court murders on March 14, 1912.

FURTHER DETAILS OF MAWSON EXPEDITION

Antarctic Party Suffered In-describable Torment.

Sydney, N. S. W., March 6.—A brief wireless has been received by Prof. David from Dr. Mawson of the British Antarctic expedition, which shows that his party suffered as much as members of Captain Scott's expedition. He says:

"While exploring on Dec. 4 a new coast line 300 miles southeast of our winter quarters, Nimis, with a dog team and almost all the food disappeared into an unfathomable crevasse. Mortz and myself, with an inadequate supply of provisions and six starving dogs, started over the plateau for the hut. We were retarded by bad weather. We subsisted chiefly on the dogs. Mortz died on Jan. 17 from causes arising from malnutrition. I arrived alone at the hut on Feb. 7, having traveled through the snow and fogs, miraculously guided by Providence through deeply crevassed areas. The Aurora, my ship, had waited until it was no longer safe and had left only a few hours before my arrival at the hut. Six men were left there to search for me."

MORE OPTION ELECTIONS

"Wets" Carry Two Towns and the "Drys" One.

Decatur, Ind., March 6.—The city of Decatur stayed in the "wet" column, although the majority was cut down from 182 of two years ago to 32. The contest has been bitterly fought by both sides.

Bryant—The "drys" were winners in the local option election held in Bear Creek township in which the town of Bryant is located, their majority being 164. Two years ago the "dry" majority was 31.

Mitchell—The "wets" won in the local option election by 129 votes. No saloons will be allowed in the residence portion of the city.

Army Is Curious to Know.

Washington, March 6.—By a provision of the United States army regulations, Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, ceases to hold that position. Whether or not he is to be reinstated by Secretary of War Garrison, is one of the most interesting of innumerable questions of personnel raised by the advent of a new administration.

Serious Fighting in Jolo.

Manila, March 6.—The town of Jolo has undergone incessant attack by the Moros for the last two weeks. Details of the operations are meager, as a rigid censorship is in force. That the fighting has been serious, however, is obvious from the arrival here of thirty-two wounded Americans.

The general impression in Washington is that William F. McCombs will accept the ambassadorship to France and will resign as chairman of the Democratic national committee. In that event Vice Chairman Homer S. Cummings, national committeeman from Connecticut, will become chairman of the committee.

SET ELECTION DATE.

Newcastle Courier: Acting on the petition for a local option election in Newcastle, filed Saturday, by the drys, the county commissioners today set Tuesday, April 1, as the date for the election. There was little contention over the date, although it was hinted that the wet element desired the election set either on Saturday or Monday, in which case it would be possible for them to get a great number of the factory men who still hold their residence here, but are working in other cities, to come back to vote.

Mental Indolence.

In commenting on the passing of Mr. Taft from the presidency, the Indianapolis Star finds that the retiring president was mentally indolent. It has been recorded in these columns and in newspapers all over the land what he accomplished and it remains for the voter to determine in his own mind whether or not that charge was justified.

The Star further finds that "he (Taft) prosecuted the trusts vigorously, for though many of the suits which have been tried under the Sherman law were undertaken during the previous administration, he has showed no lack of interest in pushing them."

Even Mr. Taft's most radical critics are now admitting, after the heat of a campaign has passed the country has given pause for calm reflection, that it was his prosecution of the trusts that brought down on his head the wrath of the interests which felt the lash of the Sherman law. But the Star tells us that many of the suits under the Sherman law were undertaken during the previous administration.

But Mr. Taft, although he may be mentally indolent, seemed to have a peculiar qualification for more than being an undertaker. He was not engaged in burying the dead, but in attacking the virile corporations that were violating the anti-trust law. As an undertaker, doubtless, he would be a failure, but as an enforcer of federal law he was a success. His bitterest enemies have not had the temerity to assail his record in this regard. Neither have they accused him of being insincere, unjust, unfair or not true to his honest opinions.

Term Extensions.

Governor Ralston has just affixed his signature to the bill providing the terms of county superintendents shall be extended two years. A similar bill providing the terms of county assessors should be extended the same length of time were killed by the legislature.

The same argument was advanced in favor of both measures. There was as much merit in one as in the other. We are led to wonder, then, why they were not both passed.

There may be an explanation in the fact that more than seventy of the ninety-two county superintendents in office in Indiana at present are Democrats. So much can not be said of the county assessors. The Republicans are said to be in the majority in this office.

There was really some merit in both bills, but it is not ascertained why, if one was to be passed, they were not both passed. The argument in favor of either of the bills was that the county assessors and superintendents would come into office the same time the township officials do, and that the whole organization of assessors and school organization would be inexperienced. It was advocated that the county heads in each branch should have had two years experience when their subordinates took office.

The 1911 legislature added two years to the terms of the township assessors and the township trustees two years ago. The plea of the legislators was that these township officials should be elected in the "off" year so that their race would be thrown out of politics as much as possible.

But each four years, under the present laws, a "green" set of township assessors will take office with an inexperienced county assessors and the work will be doubly hard, whereas if the legislature had added two years to the county assessors' terms, as they did to the county superintendents', the difficulty would have been overcome.

It is now proper and fitting that one should be astounded. The Indianapolis Star says Taft "may go down in history as the last Republican president." To be in keeping with its past utterances, the Star should say he "will" be the last.

It is predicted that there will be a revival of interest in bicycling owing to the fact that the new President rides a wheel. The office seekers will no doubt discover that it is very beneficial to their health.

TRADING STAMP BILL IS INTACT

It Passes House Without Being Amended and Goes to Governor for His Signature.

ITS ROUTE A PERILOUS ONE

Senate Passes a Bill Providing Commission to Report on Labor Conditions Among Women.

The State house of representatives has passed the Gelts trading stamp bill in its original form and the measure is now ready for the governor's signature. Just before the bill passed it was discovered that the engrossed original of the bill had been altered so as to change one of the most vital provisions. Speaker Cook later called attention to the mutilation of this bill.

The vote on the trading stamp bill was announced as 76 ayes and 15 noes. However, there was an error in the roll, as Ault, who desired to vote for the bill, was recorded against it. Putting Ault's name on the correct column would make the result 77 ayes and 14 noes. Representative O. C. Norris voted for the bill.

Van Horne called the Speaker's attention to the mutilation of the engrossed bill. In the provision which sets out that a trading stamp must have endorsed on its face its value in "lawful money of the United States," a line had been drawn through these words, and written in lead pencil above them were the words, "Goods, wares and merchandise." The latter was the standard that a majority of the house committee on Judiciary B had recommended be substituted, but by a large majority the house, on second reading of the bill, had turned down this amendment, and had adopted the minority report that the bill passed in the form in which it came from the senate.

The bill as it goes to the governor provides that every trading stamp certificate or coupon shall bear on its face its value in lawful money of the United States, and that trading stamps in lots of not less than five cents in value shall be redeemed in either cash or merchandise at the option of the holder. It has been called a "bill to regulate blue sky trading stamps."

The amendments that were sought to be made, but were defeated, provided that the stamps should bear on their face their value in goods, wares and merchandise, and that they should be redeemed in goods or cash at the option of the holder, the stamps to be worth in cash two-thirds of the merchandise value. The proposed amendments also provided for redemption in lots worth $2 or more.

The appointment of a commission by the Governor for the purpose of investigating labor conditions and working hours of women was endorsed by the senate yesterday through its passage of a bill providing for such a commission.

The bill was passed immediately after it was introduced by Senator Grube, who has championed the bill for a fifty-hour working week for women in the senate yesterday and lost.

The senate has passed the Krau bill, which provides no druggist or pharmacist will be permitted to sell any intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes except on the written prescription of a licensed physician. Under the present law any person may buy liquor at a drug store in quantities of not less than a quart if he will sign an application stating that it is to be used for medicinal purposes. The bill passed by the senate requires that the prescription, which must be written by hand and not with a typewriter, must be kept on file for at least a year, where it shall be open at all times to inspection by officers of the law and the prosecuting attorney and his deputies.

The bill says that no prescription may be refilled or duplicated and no copy can be made. The evident purpose of the bill is to make it impossible for liquor to be obtained at a drug store except in the manner and under the strict regulatory restrictions set out in the bill. It would be illegal for any druggist to sell more than sixteen ounces of liquor on any one prescription, except that on the written application of the superintendent of a hospital in the state of Indiana, stating that such liquor is to be used for medicinal purposes in such hospital, such druggist might sell at one time as much as five quarts of liquor to the hospital.

It is provided that where liquor is sold for mechanical, pharmaceutical, scientific or sacramental purposes, the druggist must be personally acquainted with the purchaser and convinced that the liquor in question will be used for the purpose named. The druggist is required to keep a record of each such sale so made, the entry to be made at the time of the sale. It shall give the name and street of the purchaser, the kind, quantity and price of the liquor so sold, and the purpose for which it is to be used. This record also shall be open to inspection. The druggist is prohibited from making any such sale if the purchaser is a person in the habit of being intoxicated. Liquors sold by a druggist are not allowed to be drunk on the premises where sold.

Any person violating any of the provisions of the bill would be liable to a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $100 for the first offense, and for each succeeding offense the fine would be not less than $100 nor more than $200, or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days, or both. And any person obtaining liquor by misrepresentation to a druggist would be guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to the same penalties as the druggist for making the sale.

The bill specifically repeals Section 2 of the "blind tiger" law of 1907, on the same subject, and also repeals all other laws that are in conflict with the bill in so far as they do so conflict.

The present Krau bill is not the same bill that was introduced by the senator from Elkhart county. When the bill came up for passage Senator Stotsenburg offered an amendment in the shape of an entire new bill for all after the enacting clause. The bill, as it stands now, is as it was amended by Stotsenburg. He explained to the senate that it would greatly strengthen the "blind tiger" law and make it more difficult for liquor to be bought at drug stores.

The Krau bill was passed by the senate by a vote of 29 to 7. It has gone to the house and has been referred to the committee on public morals.

The Young People of the Orange Christian church will give an ice cream and oyster supper at the school building next Saturday.

HENRY REES' WILL TO BE CONTESTED

YOUNGER SON GETS THE MOST

The will of the late Henry Rees will be contested says the Connorsville News. The testator, who was one of the oldest and best respected citizens near Fairview in Fayette county, passed away Sunday morning. The will was probated very quickly after his death, and brief mention was made of it in the News. Error, however, was made in the statement of the provisions of the instrument, a confusing codicil having imparted a wrong impression.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Rees died the owner of about one hundred and ninety acres of land, worth $14,000 to $15,000 and of a small personal estate. The personalty is divided equally between the three children, George E. Rees, John L. Rees and Mrs. Exire Galaspie. The realty is all bequeathed to John L. Rees, subject to the single stipulation that the sum of $1,500 be paid by him to each of the other children, George E. Rees and Mrs. Galaspie. Thus, by the terms of the will as it stands, the son, George E. Rees and the daughter, receive each a third of the small personal estate, plus $1,500, while the remainder of the estate, representing $12,000 perhaps, goes entirely to John L. Rees, the younger son.

The instrument is said to present some striking peculiarities, which, however, will not be elucidated until the case comes to trial.

The Princess offers a Lubin comedy "Two Boys" for the first picture tonight. Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe are featured in this picture. The other is an Edison drama "What Katie Did."

"The Blue Bird" comes back to the Murat, Indianapolis, the latter half of this week with the original spectacular production and big company from the New theatre, New York. It tells the story of the search by two small kiddies of a blue bird, the symbol of happiness which is ever elusive and the secret of which no one can ever find. It is a fairy fantasy, this creation of the poet Maeterlinck's, resting on a staturm of sound philosophy. Tyltyl and Mytyl, the two children who go forth to find the blue bird, discover it at least in the cage that hangs by the cottage window. Meantime the diamond, which Tyltyl wears in his hat and a turn of which shows to the wearer things as they really are, reveals the great poet's wonder vision of the world.

There are no stones that are not precious! there is nothing inanimate that has not a soul; even Bread, Sugar, Water, Fire, Dog and Cat attain quasi-humanity and speech. "There are no dead!" these children learn as they visit the Kingdom of the Past, solving a great mystery. Wars, Sickness and Evils are slowly losing their terrors, they find, conquered by benign Wisdom or Light. Up in the skies—the Kingdom of the Future—the unborn souls are waiting their turn to come on earth, Father Time being the trusty pilot. Such is in brief a part of the wonder-vision that Maeterlinck presents in his fairy drama and which the producers of the New theater elaborated into a series of gorgeous stage spectacles, enhanced by music, dances, "trick" illusions and novel lighting effects. No play pantomime that charmed the children of an older day is said to be comparable with the staged "Blue Birds" in its many sided beauty. New York enjoyed it for over a year, while the European productions in London, Paris, Berlin etc., have proved equally successful.

In this city, as in New York, the leading part of the boy Tyltyl is to be played by Master Burford Hamden, a noted juvenile from Sir Herbert Tree's company in London. In the cast of 100 more than a third are little folks, while among the adult principals are such well-known players as Cecil Yarrp, Harry Lambert, Winifred Harris, Ethel Brandon, Alice Butler, Alida Cortelvon, Charles Hampden, Dora Davidson, John Sutherland, George Sylvester.

LYTLE'S SEED DAY MARCH 14 AND 15

Ninth Annual Event Will be Celebrated at Local Drug Store—Includes Many Varieties.

ALWAYS ATTRACTS CROWD

The ninth annual sweet pea seed day will be observed at the T. W. Lytle drug store Friday and Saturday, March 14 and 15. Lytle's seed day is always looked forward to with great interest especially among the women of Rush county. Ever since Mr. Lytle has been in business here he has held what is known as seed day at his store.

The sweet pea seeds given away are of the best variety obtainable and many homes have been beautified in past seasons. The seeds are made up out of the finest named standard Grandiflora sorts and include some of the following varieties: Aurora, Blanch Ferry, Dorthy Eckford, Flora Norton, King Edward VII, Lord Nelson, Prince of Wales, and many others.

DENIES HE'S DEAD.

Newcastle Times: Emmet Langston, a well-known Knightstown citizen, was reported dead by the local papers on Saturday evening, but according to a wireless message from the scene of Mr. Langston's supposed transportation over the River the report of the demise is "greatly exaggerated," as the late Mark Twain once said.

CHAPTER XIX.

They Who Water With Tears.

As at last the news of John Rawn's collapse broke full and fair—disastrous enough to please even his late warmest friends, the stock markets east and west, became scenes of riot. The truth, of course, had leaked out regarding Rawn's fight in the last ditch. The newspapers swarmed upon Graystone hall, besieging any who could be found. Halsey refused to talk, and moreover, Rawn could not be found. This threw them upon their own resources, and what they did not know they imagined. Even thus, the wildest of them all could not imagine half; the shrewdest of the journalists could not get their hands on the "inside story" here. No one in or around or back of the stock exchanges could be found possessed of secret information which he was willing to impart. Throughout wild hours of hurrying, telegraphing, investigating, the papers kept up their frenzied search for the truth, and found it not, and knew they had not found it.

Halsey, one morning after a sleepless night, more than a week after Rawn's departure to New York, secured copies of each of the morning papers. He stood uncertain, in the great central room of Graystone hall, with these black and frowning messengers of fate in his hands, scarce daring to look at them. He felt some sense of definite disaster at hand. He glanced at last at one, and started as though struck. Calling a servant, he sent word to Mrs. Rawn inquiring if he might meet her at once.

She joined him presently, smiling faintly, giving him her hand, then feeding him to a breakfast table on the long gallery facing the lake front, a favorite spot with her. She gave the butler orders to serve them breakfast here at once; for she now learned Halsey had neither slept nor eaten. Halsey did not learn that the same also was true of her.

They seated themselves and for the time said nothing, each gazing out over the lake. The morning was calm and beautiful. The blue lake, just dotted with little whitecap rolling waves, seemed in amiable mood, and purred gently along the sea-wall, below the green and curving terrace which ran down from the gallery front. A bird chirped here and there.

Little enough the peaceful scene reflected the feelings of these, its only human figures. Virginia Rawn was pale. Dark rings showed below her eyes. Her mouth drooped just a trifle, plaintively, in a way not usual with her. She was pale, paler than her usual clean and clear ivory. Yet she was coolly beautiful in her morning gown of light figured lawn, with its wide, flowing sleeves, showing her round white arms. Halsey, frowningly serious, felt the charm of her rise about him, overwhelm him. He knew that the hour had come for him in more ways than one; that hers, for ever, was the one face and figure and voice and presence for him, hopeless and unhappy, and doomed for ever so to remain. She was not his wife. She was the wife of another man—of his enemy; the man in all the world least like himself; the man who, by virtue of that likeness, had won this woman for his own. What hope for him, Charles Halsey, for whom was no place in the world?

Without much comment he placed before her the morning papers, with their glaring headlines.

"Well," said he, "it is the end."

"Yes?" said she, smiling; "I suppose now we can learn all about our earlier life and career?"

"Quite so. Here is the entire history of Mr. Rawn's career—what he did when he was a young man, where he came from, how he rose to power, how he failed and fell—it's all here. Here's the story of the International Power company—they claim it was intended as a merger of all the traction companies of the eight leading cities of the country! Bond issue one to eight billion dollars, capitalization one to two hundred billion in stocks—you can take your choice in crazed figures. Here are biographical histories of all the known and unknown stockholders. Here, Mrs. Rawn, is a picture of yourself, as well as one of Mr. Rawn and one more of the house here—a new view, I think. The photographer must have made a flashlight of the grounds."

She smiled as he tried to jest, following his pointing finger along the blurred, brutal headlines, shrieking their discordant, impossible and inconsistent tales. The first paper, the Forum, declared the ruin of John Rawn's fortune to be now beyond all hope of repair. Rawn himself—really at that time often in a helpless stupor in a New York hotel room—was reported to have fled the country. Halsey, his son-in-law, and Halsey's wife, who really had only denied themselves to visitors and reporters—were declared to be in hiding in some secret apartments of the great castle on the North shore, a place actually but little known to any member of the select North side society in which Rawn had been, more or less on sufferance, received. Rawn's wife was also located here, in a condition verging on insanity, according to the imagination of the writers, which, after all, was fatefully near to the truth.

Virginia Rawn smiled, and turned the pages. The next journal had little else but detailed discussion of the Rawn collapse. It also asserted the scheme of the International Power company was the most bold and rapacious fraud of the day. With journalistic vaticination it insouciantly declared that the intention of the company was to establish central distributing points for power stolen from the public's great water powers, and the retail of what the journal in the argot of the day called canned power, in cheap and portable small motors applicable to countless semi-mechanical uses, all with an end of abolishing the need for horse power and for man power alike. The result, it pointed out, would be the throwing out of work of countless thousands of laboring men by the use of electricity stolen from the people themselves. The gigantic combination already was covering the main water powers. The people's present openly had been disregarded, the people's future openly and patently had been put in the gravest of peril. The entire system of government had been laid by the heels. The name of the republic had been made a mockery. Above all, it was asserted, the most intimate intent of the International Power company had been the throttling of the labor unions—against which John Rawn was known to be personally bitterly opposed—the very essence and soul of the conspiracy having been this device whose aim was to wipe out the need of unskilled labor, and to make useless and unpaid the power of human brawn.

Following these assertions—which after all were not in the least bad journalism, however good or bad had been the design of International Power—the same journal exultantly declared that labor need not yet despair, for that the gigantic conspiracy now had fallen in ruins; its leader had abdicated and fled, and his ill-gotten gains had been dissipated in his last desperate attempt to save his holdings in other stocks. In his ultimate fight he had surrendered the control of the International, so long and desperately held in his ownership, and now was ousted from the presidency, other managers being left in charge of the wreck of a desperate marauder's attempt to throttle a republic and to rule a country. And so forth, to many extra pages, all deliciously explicit, and wondrous welcome alike to those who purchase and those who purvey the news.

The chronicle of all this was accompanied in this journal not only with pictures of Graystone hall, but of the abandoned factory of the International Power company; also with portraits of Rawn and his wife and of Charles Halsey, late superintendent of the company; as well as those of Jim Sullivan, the foreman, Ann Sullivan, his wife, and other labor leaders sometimes concerned about the mysterious factory which had housed the desperate secret of International Power. As it chanced, the portraits of Ann Sullivan and Virginia Rawn had been exchanged, so that the beautiful Mrs. Rawn appeared as a hard-featured Irish woman of more than middle age; whereas Mrs. Sullivan, wife of the well-known labor leader, presented a somewhat distinguished figure in her eminently handsome gown and obviously valuable jewels.

Virginia Rawn looked calmly, smilingly, over these and many other varying details of these closing scenes in her career. "Very well," said she, pointing to the likeness accredited to her name, "this is the last time my portrait will appear in print, I suppose. What difference does it make? The older and uglier I am, the better the story! Perhaps for once Mrs. Sullivan, when she sees her picture—young, rich, with plenty of jewels—will think her dreams have come true! Maybe she's dreamed—I know I did; and I know what I am. The names and pictures are right, just as they are. She wins, not I.

"But yes, I suppose this is the end of it all, as you say," she added wearily, almost indifferently. "Of course, we've known it was coming. I suppose there was nothing else could come of it all."

Halsey at first could make no answer except to drop his face in his hands. A half groan escaped him, in spite of his attempt to rival her courage or her indifference, whichever it might be.

"I've done this," he said at last; "I've brought all this on you. It's all my fault, and it's too late now for me to help it. We couldn't straighten out things in the business now, even if I went back to work. It's too late. I've ruined you, Mrs. Rawn."

"Yes, that's plain," she answered quietly. "But isn't this just what you wanted? Haven't you always resented the success of others, deprecated the wish of some men to get money at any cost? Aren't you a Socialist at heart? Didn't you want this—just this?"

"Want it? No! How could I want anything which meant harm for you? If only you had come to me and asked me to go back—asked me to get into line!"

"You'd have done it, wouldn't you, Charley—for me?" She smiled at him, her small, white teeth showing. But back of her smile he felt the pulse of a mind.

"I don't know—how could I have helped it?"

"Then you'd have forgotten all your loyalty to those people over there? You'd have forgotten all about the rights of man of which you told me, and your devotion to the principles of this republic of which you talked—is that true? You'd have forgotten all, everything, for me?"

"Yes, I would!" He looked her fair in the eye, truthfully. "I know that, now—I didn't know it then, but I do now. Yes, I would. Just as I told him—Mr. Rawn."

"You told him, what?"

"Why, that we all have our price. I suppose I had mine."

"So you'd have done that if I had asked you?"

"Then in God's name why did you not ask me? At least, I'd have saved you this!" He smote on the paper with his clenched fist. "Why didn't you ask me to save you this humiliation?"

"I did not, because I knew all along what you'd do if I did ask you."

Silence fell between them now.

"Why didn't you?" he once more demanded, half-whispering. "You'd already won. You'd have won me—my principles—my honor."

"Because I did not want to win!" she answered sharply.

"Win what?"

"I was sent to bring you into camp, to get you, Charley. I did not want to—I did not! I was afraid I would!"

"I don't think I quite understand."

His face was white, his voice low and clear, his eye full on hers.

"I was sent out for you, Charley—by my own husband! You know it, we both knew it. I suppose he's been waiting somewhere for me to get word to him that I had done what I was told to do—that I had got you in hand, willing to renounce everything that you held good in your own life. Well, it's too late, now! I'm glad!"

"He sent you out after me—With what restrictions?"

"None. He didn't care how. He told me he didn't. That's why I've been keeping away from you. I was afraid I'd win—I was afraid I'd save all this."

She nodded her head, including the splendors of the mansion house, its view of the lake, all the gracious, delicate ministries of wealth.

"Good God!" Halsey broke out. "The man who would do that is not worth a woman's second thought."

"Of course not. And the woman who would do that—"

"Don't ask me about that; I can't think. All I know is that if you had asked me to do anything in the world, I think I'd have said yes."

"For me?"

"Yes, for you. It's the truth. It's all out, at last! There's the whole story now of John Rawn—all of it, in black and white! Here's all my story—to you. You must have known—"

AMERICAN PRISONERS FREED

Several Men From United States Escape In Exodus From Mexican Prison.

Arrivals recently at Laredo, Tex., from the City of Mexico say that hundreds of the 4,000 convicts who were released from Belem prison by the rebels during the first outbreak joined the Diaz standard.

Besides the 4,000 Mexicans who were confined therein the prison held about twenty-five foreigners.

Among the foreign prisoners who were liberated were George I. Ham, a Canadian, former president of the United States Banking company of the City of Mexico, who was convicted of wrecking that institution and under sentence of twelve years. Others were Robert Crump, an American and former president of the Federal bank, which failed a few years ago; Benjamin Wilson, an American, held on demand of the United States government, pending extradition, to answer charges of fraud, which he is alleged to have committed in Oklahoma, and Larry Martin, who shot and killed Dr. Clarke in the City of Mexico nearly two years ago.

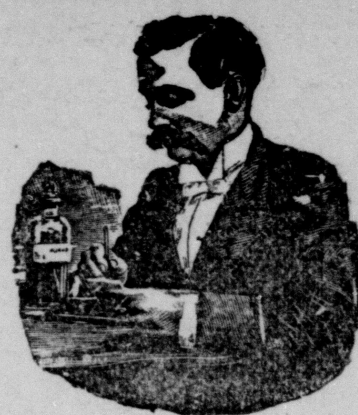

CHINA PLANS AERIAL FLEET.

Oriental Republic to Order Machines From French Makers.

The president of the Chinese republic, on the suggestion of his French military adviser, Major Brissaud Desmilles, has decided upon the creation of an aerial fleet, the organization of which will be intrusted to French officers.

All Chinese staff officers, it was announced in Paris recently, will be required to pass through the aviation school, either as pilots or observers, and a series of competitions, to which all aeroplane constructors will be invited to send machines, will be held in Peking in 1914.

The Chinese government, it is said, is anxious to have a great fleet of aeroplanes, which will be used for police work in time of peace.

SENATOR KERN HIGHLY HONORED

Senate Democrats Make Him
Caucus Chairman.

A VICTORY FOR PROGRESSIVES

Result of Party Conference Proved That With Its Accession to Power in the Senate the Democratic Party Also Had Become Progressive, Old Wheel Horses Being Retired by Those of Swifter Pace.

Washington, March 6.—Succeeding Senator Thomas F. Martin of Virginia, who withdrew from the race a few days ago when it became apparent that he could not win, Senator John Worth Kern of Indiana was elected Democratic caucus chairman. Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada was chosen vice chairman and Senator Willard Saulsbury of Delaware was elected secretary. The caucus was harmonious. Senator Kern was authorized to appoint a steering committee of nine members, of which he is to be the ex-officio chairman.

Republicans in their party conference chose Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire as chairman and Senator Kenyon of Iowa as secretary. The result of the party conference proved that simultaneously with its accession to power in the senate the Democratic party had also become progressive. Senator Kern, the new chairman, has been but two years in that body, but he has been one of the most progressive of the Democratic leaders and on a number of occasions has chafed under the leadership of his party in that body. His selection broke the ancient rule of seniority in the senate. In choosing a vice chairman the Democrats again overlooked the conservatives in their party. Mr. Newlands has been one of the most progressive men on the Democratic side. The secretary also is from the new crop of senators and probably one of the most progressive of them.

It is evident that the Democratic leadership in the senate will be exemplified by men like Senator Kern, Senator Hoke Smith, Senator Gore and the younger element. On the Republican side, for sixteen years the scene of activity incident to party control, everything was as silent as a churchyard at midnight. There are not many new faces on the Republican side.

The Democrats elected to the house in the new congress perfected organization at their caucus and despite threats that were made by the "insurgents," Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama was named to succeed himself as leader. The Clark-Underwood program was put through without a dissenting vote. Champ Clark was renominated to succeed himself as speaker.

Vice President Marshall got through his first day as presiding officer of the senate without any embarrassment. At his elbow was the secretary of the senate, Mr. Bennett, who coached him. Mr. Marshall does not know all the senators by sight yet, but he said today he hoped to get them in his mind's eye in a short time.

EMILIO WAS NOT SLAIN

Brother of Martyred Mexican President Refutes Official Report.

San Antonio, Tex., March 6.—Emilio Madero, who was officially reported dead by the Mexican government and American ambassador, has reached here after an overland trip from Torreon to the American border. With Emilio were his brother Raoul and three servants who accompanied them the 600 miles on horseback from Torreon to Marathon, Tex. They came from Marathon to this city on the first train, where they joined another brother of the late president of Mexico, Gabriel Madero. Neither Emilio nor Raoul would say anything further than that the other brothers have already said as to the future plans of the Madero family. Both refused absolutely to discuss Mexican politics.

Gabriel stated that an aerogram had been received from their father, who with the widow of the slain president and other relatives is on his way to New York, from Havana, saying all are well. It is understood that Alfonso Madero will meet them in New York.

The scepter of political power in the United States senate has passed across the main aisle from the Republican to the Democratic side.

President Wilson has named John H. Marble of California to succeed Franklin K. Lane as a member of the interstate commerce commission.

The French have enacted a law providing for three years' compulsory military service for everybody, irrespective of rank or station and exempting no one.

A suffrage bill has been passed by the Michigan legislature by which an amendment is to be submitted to the voters to decide if women shall have the right to vote.

Five handsome monuments on the Gettysburg battlefield were battered and broken by a vandal, who evidently used a heavy hammer for his work. No clue to the offender has been obtained.

LOYD-GEORGE URGES NEED OF HELPING ENGLAND'S POOR

He Would Lighten Plowman's Lot by Removing Great Abuses.

"The foremost task of Liberalism in the near future is the regeneration of rural life—the emancipation of the land of this country from the paralyzing grip of a rusty, effete and unprofitable system."

David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer of England, made this momentous declaration in London recently at the annual meeting of the National Liberal club. The land question has been Mr. Lloyd-George's hobby, and the Conservatives have accused him of being ambitious to introduce the Henry George system of taxation in Great Britain.

Recently they have been asserting that the cabinet has sidetracked his scheme, but the recent speech by the chancellor of the exchequer indicates that the government soon will grapple with perhaps the greatest attempt in its extensive program of social reforms.

Speaking of the agricultural laborers, the chancellor said:

"Our reports prove conclusively that there are hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of men, women and children living under conditions with regard to wages, housing and the rest of labor conditions who ought to make this great empire hang its head with shame."

WILSON'S FIRST DAY ON THE JOB

New President Gives Office Seekers a Jolt.

NO PERSONAL APPLICATIONS

Mr. Wilson Gives It Out Pointblank That He Will Not Be Distracted From the Duties in Hand by the Importunities of Pap Hunters, Whom He Directs to Take Up Their Cases With Department Heads.

Washington, March 6.—Serving notice that he has shifted the burden of patronage distribution from his shoulders to those of the members of his cabinet, was Woodrow Wilson's first important act as president.

This statement by the new president, which was only one of several developments which indicated the presence of a new regime and new methods at the White House, follows: "The president regrets that he is obliged to announce that he deems it his duty to decline to see applicants for office in person except when he himself invites the interview. It is his purpose and desire to devote his attention very earnestly and very constantly to the business of the government and the large questions of policy affecting the whole nation, and he knows from his experience as governor of New Jersey—where it fell to him to make innumerable appointments—that the greater part both of his time and of his energy will be spent in personal interviews with candidates unless he sets an invariable rule in the matter. It is his intention to deal with appointments through the heads of the several executive departments."

It is hard to say whether the horde of office-seekers that has already invaded Washington, or members of congress, were jarred the harder by President Wilson's patronage statement. It was apparent immediately that his declaration of freedom meant that the cabinet officers under his administration will wield a much more powerful arm than in previous years.

Mr. Wilson got to the executive offices in the morning just in time to witness the swearing in of his private secretary.

The first business taken up by the new president was dictating letters to retiring cabinet members and their assistant secretaries, accepting their resignations. Charles R. Crane of Chicago, who has been mentioned for a diplomatic post, was the first visitor, and a few minutes later the members of Mr. Wilson's cabinet began to troop in for their first meeting. The cabinet was in session only about an hour, and just as the members were leaving Uncle Joe Cannon sauntered in to pay his respects. Uncle Joe was on a round of all the departments in Washington saving farewells before retiring from public life.

Mr. Wilson had cleared his desk at about 12:30 and practically the entire afternoon was devoted to receiving visitors. Late in the afternoon the new president went for a long auto ride and last night he spent quietly in the White House.

The Cabinet Takes Office.

The Democratic administration of the great executive departments of the government got under way in the afternoon with the qualification of all but two of President Wilson's advisers as executive officers of the United States. Throughout the department buildings there were little inaugurations as President Wilson's appointees took the oath of office for their respective positions.

President Wilson sent the names of his cabinet officers to the senate shortly after noon, so that when the senate convened at 2 o'clock it required but a few minutes for the confirmation of all on the list.

Secretary of State Bryan took the oath of office soon after 4 o'clock in the office vacated by P. C. Knox, who left at once for Palm Beach. Later in the day it was Mr. Bryan's task to countersign the commissions of his colleagues in the cabinet, brief personal sketches of whom follow:

LOOK YEARS YOUNGER! GRAY HAIR DARKENED BEAUTIFULLY WITH SAGE.

Says Sage and Sulphur Will Stop Falling Hair and Cure Dandruff.

Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and it surely helps folks appear years younger.

FEW FARMERS ARE SOWING OATS CROP

It is Placed on Top of Ground and Alternate Freezing and Thawing Covers Seed With Earth.

WHEAT OUTLOOK GOOD

A great many farmers have already begun to sow oats but all of the grain, so far as is known, has been sown on top of the ground. This method is practiced considerably, especially on the clay lands of the county, where the alternate freezing and thawing works the seed into the ground and thus covers it. It is said this method of seeding is not very successfully practiced on the sand lands of the county. The main point in favor of sowing the oats on top of the ground, or on faith, as some call it, is the fact that they may be sown much earlier than would otherwise be possible, a thing which is very necessary in order to raise a full crop.

The seeding of clover seed is already going on at full blast, and some farmers have sown the seed even earlier than this date. When the clover seed is sown early it works itself into the ground before the weather gets warm enough to sprout it. A large number of farmers, however, practice the method of seeding clover as late as April and then run a light harrow over the ground in order to cover the seed.

Farmers say the outlook for a wheat crop in this country was never better than at present. The prospect for other crops on the farm look good.

would be doubled in value, because stock value is estimated by its earning power. As the output would increase, so would the dividends, and correspondingly so, the value of the stock.

It is believed the industry would eventually become one of the biggest in Indiana. At the beginning the factory would employ fifty men, and the weekly payroll would amount to from $2,500 to $3,000. It is considered fair and conservative to estimate that eighty per cent of this weekly payroll would circulate in local channels. If plans do not miscarry, the factory will be ready to supply the trade with Ideal corn husking machines in 1914. An investment in the new organization is not considered a speculation because no misrepresentations are made and everything is open and above boards.

TIME FOR MORTGAGE EXEMPTION IS HERE

Property Owners Who Want Reduction in Assessment May File Affidavits by May 1.

$700 IS LIMIT OF EXEMPTION

The time has arrived for the filing of mortgage deduction affidavits. Under the law governing this practice such affidavits must be filed between the first of March and first of May. They may be sworn to before any notary and a number of the local notaries make a business of preparing these affidavits during the "open season."

After such affidavits are prepared they have to be filed with the county auditor. The notaries usually wait until near the first of May, when they take their affidavits to the auditor in a bunch and file them.

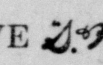

The mortgage exemption law allows people who have mortgage property to secure a reduction in their assessment. No reduction of more than $700 is allowed.

LIVED IN MOSCOW BEFORE THE WAR

Dr. James L. Thompson, Age 80 Years, Eminent Oculist, Dead in Indianapolis, Once Lived Here.

PLIED TRADE AS A COBBLER

In Early Days Man Needed Trade as Well as Profession—Born in England.

Dr. James Livingstone Thompson, eighty-two years old, probably the most eminent ocular specialist in Indiana who died at his home in Indianapolis yesterday, lived in Moscow for many years before the civil war and plied his trade as a cobbler. He is remembered by many Rushville and Rush county men.

Dr. Thompson has been in failing health for five years. His decline began when his hip was broken from a fall. The immediate cause of his demise was pneumonia.

Dr. Thompson was a typical village cobbler, according to stories told by his friends. He was generally known as "Doc." in Moscow and vicinity in those days. He had a right to the title since he had been graduated from Rush Medical college at Chicago. But in those days the practice was not very heavy and he worked as a cobbler to make his "pin" money.

Dr. Thompson was a great huntsman as well as cobbler and village physician in the early days around Moscow. When business was slack in either trade or profession, men here who remember him say, he would spend a day at a time in the fields in search of game.

He came to be a marksman of some ability. One day, so a story still remembered by Rushville men runs, Dr. Thompson was sitting in the door of his shop peering vigilantly on bad soles when an Italian, carrying a miniature wax statue of a man, came into his range of vision. Dr. Thompson arose quietly, took his trusty musket from the wall, and with one shot cut the statue off the board on which the Italian was carrying it. Then he resumed his work as if nothing had occurred.

Dr. Thompson was born in London, England, October 5, 1832, and attended private schools there. He came to this country in 1856 and after a journey on foot through Minnesota and other parts of what was then regarded as the far northwest, began the study of medicine at St. Paul. Later he studied in Chicago and was graduated from Rush Medical college in 1860.

At the outbreak of the civil war, he enlisted in the United States army. He was assistant surgeon from May, 1863, to February, 1864; was major and surgeon in the United States artillery, 1864 to 1865; surgeon-in-chief at Post Columbus, Kentucky, and medical director for the district of western Kentucky until October, 1865, when he resigned. He then began the general practice of medicine at Harrison, O., where he continued for two years. From there he went to Cincinnati, where for two years he was assistant to Dr. Williams, famous as an oculist. In 1873 Dr. Thompson removed to Indianapolis, where for forty years he made a specialty of the treatment of diseases of the eye and achieved a reputation that brought to him patients from all over the United States.

Dr. Thompson was a member of the Indianapolis Literary Society, of which he was president in 1893-94, had been president of the Marion County Medical Society, was a member of the Patriotic Order of the Loyal Legion and a member of the Meridian Street M. E. church.

Though British born, he was thoroughly American. Some years ago, when a movement was on foot to buy a silver plate service for the battleship Indiana he came to the front with a large subscription. Then, thinking that the project was not going forward rapidly enough he gave another subscription, and was ready with a third had his friends not persuaded him to give others a chance. He was an ardent believer in a big navy and rejoiced exceedingly every time the congress made an appropriation for dreadnoughts.

Dr. Thompson is survived by a daughter, Mrs. John H. Oliver, and her two children, and by two children of his son, the late Dr. Dan A. Thompson, James L. Thompson, Jr., and Martha Thompson; also by a sister, Mrs. E. H. Bergh of Chicago.

QUESTION ABOUT BUILDING ROADS

Deputy Auditor Says Graham Highway Would Put Township Above Bonded Indebtedness Limit.

COUNTY ATTORNEY DISPUTES IT

Charles Bales, deputy auditor, and John Kiplinger, county attorney, expected to do some figuring this afternoon to determine whether the Bruce Graham turnpike road, the contract for which was let Tuesday, could be started before May. The deputy auditor has already done a little figuring, and he contends that the building of the Graham road and the paving of Perkins and adjacent parts of Sixth, Seventh and Eighth streets will put Rushville township eight thousand dollars above the bonded indebtedness limit for road building. The county attorney says the building of the two roads will not exceed the limit as provided by law.

If the deputy auditor is right in his contention, it means that the building of the Graham road can not be started until some time in May. By that time Rush county will have received its share of the spring installment of taxes and the replenishing of the treasury will make the building of the road possible.

JURY OBTAINED IN DAMAGE SUIT

But Case of Dorothy Taylor Against Traction Terminal Co., For $25,000 is Settled Soon Afterwards.

OPENING ARGUMENT MADE

The first opening argument in the $25,000 damage suit of Mrs. Dorothy Taylor of the Indianapolis against the Indianapolis Traction Terminal company was made this afternoon by the plaintiff's attorney and the defense began when a settlement was made. The case was called this morning and it was late in getting started due to early efforts to compromise. The sum involved was not learned. The greater part of the day was used in securing the jury.

Mrs. Taylor, the plaintiff in the suit, claims to have been injured when a Lexington avenue car crashed into a Virginia avenue car on which she was riding. Mrs. Taylor was not able to be in court on account of her condition. The case promised to be a hard fought legal battle.

Generally fair tonight and Friday. Rising temperature Friday.

OILING BILL IS UP TO GOVERNOR

Senator Cary Jackson's Measure Which Has Special Application Here is Passed by House.

MANY BILLS ARE MADE LAWS

Term of Present County Superintendents Extended Two Years—Prosecutors Must Appear

Senator Cary Jackson's bill giving cities the power to authorize a tax levy for sprinkling and oiling the streets and for making other improvements was passed by the lower house of the Indiana general assembly yesterday. The bill is now ready for the Governor's signature, it having passed the senate recently.

The bill has special application here because Rushville has had difficulty in keeping the dust down in the summertime because of the scarcity of water. Some residents have oiled their streets in the summer and others have not. The new law will give the city the power to do this, and the question that has agitated Rushville for several summers will be settled.

Governor Ralston signed the bill introduced by Representative Ensie, providing for the extension of the terms of all the county superintendents in the state for two years. The measure provides that county superintendents shall be elected in June, 1917, and take office in August, thus increasing the present officials' term two years. The bill caused much adverse criticism in both houses, but an organization of school people succeeded in pushing the measure through.

The Governor signed the Ratts bill, providing for the cleaning of milk, cream and ice cream containers, as soon as they are emptied.

Governor Ralston has signed the Grube bill, which provides for the appearance of prosecuting attorneys in divorce cases, where no other appearance of counsel is made.

The bill requires the judges of courts wherein divorce cases are pending to notify the prosecuting attorneys to appear in behalf of the state to fight for the defense in the case. The prosecuting attorneys are to be paid $5 by the plaintiff in each case, and unless such payments are made within twenty days from the time of the filing of the divorce, the petition for divorce proceedings is to be stricken from the docket. The bill carries an emergency clause and is now in effect.

The Sullivan bill, giving interested parties in drainage proceedings the right to go into court, if possible, that the drain, if enlarged or extended, will still be insufficient also was signed by the Governor in case the court finds that the extension or enlargement proposed will be sufficient for the drainage of the land it is intended to drain, then the right of remonstrance against the drainage extension is denied the interested parties.

The Statesburg bill, providing that independent newspaper may get legal advertising when there are no papers of the two leading political parties, was another bill signed by the Governor. The W. W. Spencer house bill, establishing a uniform law for negotiable instruments, also was signed.

Vern Norris will hold a public sale at his farm northeast of the city tomorrow. The sale will be held under a tent rain or shine.

A new French aeroplane engine has 14 cylinders, each with its own magneto and lubrication system, mounted around a shaft.

TOM J. GERAGHTY ARRIVES EN REEL

Former Rushville Newspaper Man Reaches Here in Motion Picture Without Injury.

REPUBLICAN CLOSING UP SHOP

Our Hero Adopts Violent Methods And Becomes Affluent After Many Trying Experiences.

Tom J. Geraghty of New York City arrived, en reel, this morning at 7:50 o'clock via Adams express and at 8:37 o'clock the Daily Republican had shut up shop and seventeen of the forces were at the Princess theater acting as censors for the motion picture in which the former Rushville newspaper man had the title role.

The motion picture, entitled, "The Making of a Reporter, or The Wages of Sin," was made by the Vitaphone company for the New York Herald newspaper staff's annual banquet, and men employed in the paper take all the parts. The picture was shown at the banquet last Saturday night, and after a few times run at the Herald Square theatre for the benefit of the Herald "family," it was rushed out here by special request of Mr. Geraghty so that his old friends could see him in action.

The picture will be released on the regular Vitaphone circuit and will likely be shown in many parts of the United States. Since the whole story centers about Tom, who is the country reporter, the reel leads off with "Thomas J. Geraghty from Rushville, Ind."

The picture opens with Tom leaving the Pennsylvania terminal, dressed in tight black trousers, a white shirt, close-fitting coat, plaid vest and small black stiff hat with the railroad identification ticket still sticking in the band. Tom got a laugh from his Rushville friends after the first few feet by the characteristic movement of rubbing his hand across his mouth. Just as natural as life, yes sir!

Tom proceeds to Broadway, looking at his dollar watch which is attached with a strap watchchain and packing his keister in true rube fashion, when he is accosted by a regular New York newspaper reporter. The reporter gets acquainted and steers him into a cafe. They have a little drink together. The reporter attempts to make a getaway, leaving our hero, who has just arrived from interior Indiana, with the bill to pay.

But Tom, guileless as he looks, refuses to "fall for" the "gag" and gives chase, the waiter at their heels. The three run to the Herald office, with the hot pool following, and an accounting finally has to be made when Tom catches the reporter and the waiter catches them both in the reporters' room.

The regular reporter recedes the Hoosier rube has enough sticktoitiveness in his make-up to make a good reporter and determines to reveal to the country gentleman the ways, the whims, ay, even the most intimate view of the life in newspaperdom.

Tom is led to the front of the Herald office and is shown the staff as "it" goes to work. The common reporters are pictured with eyeglasses, sleek plug hats, fur-collared overcoats, evening clothes and walking sticks. They rode to the office in taxicabs and ate at the Waldorf Astoria. Tom narrowly misses being run over every time a taxi pulls up at the office. The chief editors, as they appear in the picture, look like tramps, walk to the office and eat "hotmollie" sandwiches at a portable lunch stand on the street corner.

Our hero does not take kindly to the newspaper game, but he consents to a trial after the beauties of it are depicted. He insists on holding his typewriter in his lap as he writes he drapes the top of the machine with his hat. The sedate managing editor goes into convulsions and wads up and tramples the yokel's first "story."

Our hero's finances run low. He attempts to make a touch off the city editor who repulses him. Driven to dire straits, he holds up the cartoonist with a shotgun and lifts all the money and valuables the man has. Suffice to say, he finds the violent methods finally bring him to affluence.

The picture will be shown at the Princess theater some time next week, announcement of which will be made later.

WINDSOR HOTEL OWNER EXPIRES

V. C. Brown, Age 63, Dies in Indianapolis Sanatorium of Heart Trouble and Brights' Disease.

WIDOW AND SON SURVIVORS

V. C. Brown, proprietor of the Windsor hotel, age sixty-three years, died at Fletcher's sanatorium in Indianapolis last night after a long illness. He has been afflicted with heart trouble and Brights' disease for several months. His decline in health began last Thanksgiving day and he has been steadily growing worse since then.

Mr. Brown came here from Greensburg and took charge of the Windsor hotel about a year ago. Previous to that he had been proprietor of a Greensburg hotel for five years. Mr. Brown was a native of Michigan and located in Greensburg after a long residence at Coldwater, Mich. He was an experienced hotel man, having been engaged in the business all his life.

He is survived by a widow, who was his second wife, and a son, S. C. L. Brown who runs a hotel in Ionia, Michigan. The body will be taken to a small town in Michigan for burial.

DIES AT MUNCIE.

Mrs. Robert Dunn, age seventy-five years, formerly of this city, died at her home in Muncie this morning. She was formerly Miss Eleanor Bodine and was a sister of William Bodine of Morristown. The body will be brought here Saturday for burial.

IS NO BONUS OR WATERED STOCK

Ideal Husker Company Wants to Sell Fourth of Capitalization in Rush County.

$200,000 IS ALREADY ISSUED

Remaining $100,000 Will be Held in Reserve For Future Development—Estimate of Earnings.

There is no preferred bonus or watered stock in the Ideal Husker company, a concern conceived by local men to manufacture a corn husking machine invented, perfected and patented by Rushville men. Stock salesmen are now in the field and hope to dispose of a hundred thousand dollars worth in this country.

The new concern has expressed its desire to locate in Rushville. It will ask no bonus. It will not ask for a lot sale to get a factory site. All that it asks is that the people of Rush county invest a hundred thousand dollars in what appears to be an invention that will revolutionize the farming industry.

The company was capitalized at $400,000. Half of the capitalization has been issued in stock to the organizers who are behind the men that perfected the invention after years of hard study and labor.

The second issue of stock was for a hundred thousand dollars and salesmen for the United States Realty company of Indianapolis are now attempting to dispose of that in this county. The county has been divided into four districts and a salesman assigned to each district. Under the plan the salesmen hope to dispose of the stock in sixty days, with the co-operation of Rushville people. The officers of the company are serving without salary and no money is being expended in any way. The other hundred thousand dollar stock issue will not be made except to be used in developing the company later.

It is estimated that the earning power of the plant, as soon as it is putting out corn huskers at the rate of fifteen hundred a year, which it is expected will be done the first year, will be at least fifty thousand dollars a year. Figuring on the basis of the total capitalization, the dividends would be twelve and a half per cent. This is a conservative estimate because the dividends would be paid only on the stock issued.

This, it is pointed out, would make the stock worth more than par at the very outset. In reality the stock

DR. FRIEDMANN GETS
BACKSET IN GOTHAMHealth Board Refuses to Take Him Seriously.

New York, March 6.—Dr. Friedmann's request for an opportunity to demonstrate his treatment for tuberculosis in a hospital controlled by the board of health has been turned down. It remains to be seen whether any private incorporated hospital lets him in, in the face of this official refusal. If not, he apparently must go away from this city in order to give his remedy the test which he professes to desire.

Dr. Lederle, chairman of the board of health, would not say what reasoning was back of this pronouncement. The advisory board, he observed, simply did not "think a clinical test expedient at this time."

The Waldorf gave warning to Dr. Friedmann that if he wanted to make doctor's offices out of his rooms in the hotel in which he might receive tuberculosis patients he would have to look elsewhere for accommodations. Dr. Friedmann and his retinue took the hint, packed up his cultures and trunks and left.

DEADLY NAVAL MANEUVERS

German Cruiser Sends a Destroyer to the Bottom.

Heligoland, Germany March 6.—Two officers and sixty-eight of the crew of the German torpedo boat destroyer "S 178" were drowned when the vessel was rammed by the cruiser Yorck during maneuvers in the North sea. Among the dead are the commander of the destroyer, Lieutenant Koch, and his first officer. The surgeon and engineer and fifteen men of the crew were saved. The destroyer sank immediately.

Robbers Crack Postoffice Safe.

Orleans, Ind., March 6.—Robbers broke into the postoffice here and blew the safe open, but were frightened away before obtaining any loot. The explosion of the safe was heard by Dr. W. H. Patton, residing near by, and he fired a shotgun, causing the robbers to flee. The safe was badly damaged.

Former Vice President Ill.

New York, March 6.—Levi P. Morton former vice president of the United States, is seriously ill at his home, 998 Fifth avenue. Mr. Morton is now in his eighty-ninth year.

Billy Papke was disqualified for fouling in the fifteenth round of his fight with Frank Klaus at Paris.

A Message to Railroad Men.

E. S. Bacon, 11 Bast St., Bath, Me., sends out this warning to railroaders everywhere. "My work as conductor or caused chronic inflammation of the kidneys and I was miserable and all play out. From the day I began taking Foley Kidney Pills I began to regain my strength, and I am better now than I have been for twenty years." Try them, F. B. Johnson & Company, Rushville, Indiana.

HOUSE PASSES
GARNISHEE BILLMuch Confusion Marked the Vote On It.

FLOOR LEADER AGAINST IT

In Casting a Negative Vote Mr. Spencer Characterized the Measure as "Infamous" and as an "Outrage," and Charged That Members of Grocers' Organization Had "Browbeaten Members of the Legislature."

Indianapolis, March 6.—The approval of the house has been given to the Weidler garnishee bill, the passage of which several Democratic representatives predicted will cause their party's defeat at the next election, the vote being 52 to 43. The bill now goes to the senate for final action.

The measure has caused more heated argument and has engendered more bitterness than any other measure introduced in the present legislature. The house was in a turmoil during the debate which preceded the vote. Floor Leader Spencer, in casting a negative vote, characterized the bill as "infamous" and as an "outrage." He charged that members of the grocers' organization, which has promoted an extensive campaign for such legislation, had "browbeaten members of the legislature."

Most of the afternoon session yesterday was occupied with debates on the Koenig workmen's compensation bill, which was passed by a vote of 77 to 20, and the garnishee measure.

Among the measures passed at the morning session were the Grube senate bill to add two years, to the term of Thomas W. Brolley, state statistician, and the Gets trading stamp bill.

The compensation law, drafted by representatives of the Indiana Federation of Labor and the Indiana Manufacturers' and Shippers' association, provides for the establishment of a state liability board of awards consisting of three members. A state insurance fund, to which employers may contribute voluntarily, would be created. The board would have for its duty the settlement of personal injury claims, the compensation being based on a sliding scale of awards, the highest being $3,400, provided for in the bill.

Women's Working Conditions.

The appointment of a commission by the governor for the purpose of investigating labor conditions and working hours of women was indorsed by the senate through its passage of a bill providing for such a commission. This bill was passed immediately after it was introduced by Senator Grube, who had championed the bill for a fifty-hour working week for women in the senate the day before and lost.

"Some of the senators voted against the bill because they thought it was not scientific," said Senator Grube. "Here is an opportunity to get a scientific bill. The commission will have an opportunity to make a thorough study of labor conditions among women and to make recommendations for legislation which will be thoroughly scientific."

The commission is to be composed of five members, one of whom must be an employer, one an employee and one a woman. It is to hold hearings in at least ten different localities, and it will have the power to examine witnesses, visit factories and obtain any information it needs. An appropriation of $2,000 is provided for the expenses, but the members of the commission are to serve without salary.

WITHOUT ANY KNOWN CAUSE

Indianapolis Man Kills Young Woman and Shoots Himself.

Indianapolis, March 6.—Ben Weiss, twenty-six years old, employed at a glass works, shot and killed Ethel Finley, twenty-five years old, at the home of his brother, Claude Weiss. After firing the fatal shot Weiss turned his revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his body just above the heart. He is dying at the city hospital.

The cause of the murder and attempted suicide is unknown to the police. Miss Finley, a niece of Mrs. Claude Weiss, was on a visit here from Tarentum, Pa., her home. She had packed her clothing preparatory to returning home today. Relatives denied that Weiss and Miss Finley had ever been lovers or that there had been undue intimacy between them. There was, they declared, no reason for the tragedy.

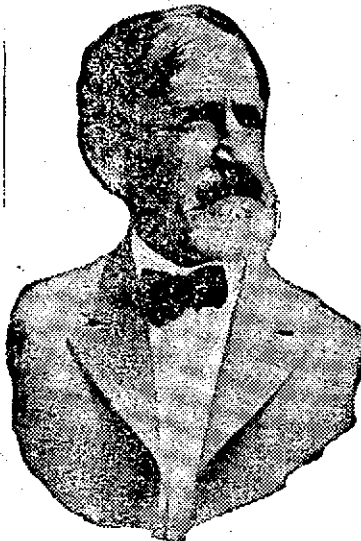

Death Spares County a Trial.

Jeffersonville, Ind., March 6.—Dallas Bower, aged twenty-five, whose trial was set for March 14, on the charge of killing his stepmother, Mrs. Eliza Bower, aged forty-five, Nov. 10, 1912, is dead in the Clark county jail of dropsy and heart disease. He killed his stepmother with an ax. The only cause was an aversion for his father's fourth wife.

Another Respite For the Allens.

Richmond, Va., March 6.—Governor Mann has granted a respite until March 28 to Floyd Allen and his son, Claude Swanson Allen, under sentence to die in the electric chair at the state penitentiary on Friday next for their part in the Hillville court murders on March 14, 1912.

FURTHER DETAILS OF MAWSON EXPEDITIONAntarctic Party Suffered Indescribable Torment.

Sydney, N. S. W., March 6.—A brief wireless has been received by Prof. David from Dr. Mawson of the British Antarctic expedition, which shows that his party suffered as much as members of Captain Scott's expedition. He says:

"While exploring on Dec. 4 a new coast line 200 miles southeast of our winter quarters, Ninis, with a dog team and almost all the food disappeared into an unfathomable crevasse. Mortz and myself, with an inadequate supply of provisions and six starving dogs, started over the plateau for the hut. We were retarded by bad weather. We subsisted chiefly on the dogs. Mortz died on Jan. 17 from causes arising from malnutrition. I arrived alone at the hut on Feb. 7, having traveled through the snow and fogs, miraculously guided by Providence through deeply crevassed areas. The Aurora, my ship, had waited until it was no longer safe and had left only a few hours before my arrival at the hut. Six men were left there to search for me."

MORE OPTION ELECTIONS

"Wets" Carry Two Towns and the
"Drys" One.

Decatur, Ind., March 6.—The city of Decatur stayed in the "wet" column, although the majority was cut down from 182 of two years ago to 32. The contest has been bitterly fought by both sides.

Bryant—The "drys" were winners in the local option election held in Bear Creek township in which the town of Bryant is located, their majority being 164. Two years ago the "dry" majority was 31.

Mitchell—The "wets" won in the local option election by 129 votes. No saloons will be allowed in the residence portion of the city.

Army Is Curious to Know.

Washington, March 6.—By a provision of the United States army regulations, Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, ceases to hold that position. Whether or not he is to be reinstated by Secretary of War Garrison, is one of the most interesting of innumerable questions of personnel raised by the advent of a new administration.

Serious Fighting in Jolo.

Manila, March 6.—The town of Jolo has undergone incessant attack by the Moros for the last two weeks. Details of the operations are meager, as a rigid censorship is in force. That the fighting has been serious, however, is obvious from the arrival here of thirty-two wounded Americans.

The general impression in Washington is that William F. McCombs will accept the ambassadorship to France and will resign as chairman of the Democratic national committee. In that event Vice Chairman Homer S. Cummings, national committeeman from Connecticut, will become chairman of the committee.

SET ELECTION DATE.

Newcastle Courier: Acting on the petition for a local option election in Newcastle, filed Saturday, by the drys, the county commissioners today set Tuesday, April 1, as the date for the election. There was little contention over the date, although it was hinted that the wet element desired the election set either on Saturday or Monday, in which case it would be possible for them to get a great number of the factory men who still hold their residence here, but are working in other cities, to come back to vote.

Mental Indolence.

In commenting on the passing of Mr. Taft from the presidency, the Indianapolis Star finds that the retiring president was mentally indolent. It has been recorded in these columns and in newspapers all over the land what he accomplished and it remains for the voter to determine in his own mind whether or not that charge was justified.

The Star further finds that "he (Taft) prosecuted the trusts vigorously, for, though many of the suits which have been tried under the Sherman law were undertaken during the previous administration, he has showed no lack of interest in pushing them."

Even Mr. Taft's most radical critics are now admitting, after the heat of a campaign has passed the country has given pause for calm reflection, that it was his prosecution of the trusts that brought down on his head the wrath of the interests which felt the lash of the Sherman law. But the Star tells us that many of the suits under the Sherman law were undertaken during the previous administration.

But Mr. Taft, although he may be mentally indolent, seemed to have a peculiar qualification for more than being an undertaker. He was not engaged in burying the dead, but in attacking the virile corporations that were violating the anti-trust law. As an undertaker, doubtless, he would be a failure, but as an enforcer of federal law he was a success. His bitterest enemies have not had the temerity to assail his record in this regard. Neither have they accused him of being insincere, unjust, unfair or not true to his honest opinions.

Term Extensions.

Governor Ralston has just affixed his signature to the bill providing the terms of county superintendents shall be extended two years. A similar bill providing the terms of county assessors should be extended the same length of time were killed by the legislature.

The same argument was advanced in favor of both measures. There was as much merit in one as in the other. We are led to wonder, then, why they were not both passed.

There may be an explanation in the fact that more than seventy of the ninety-two county superintendents in office in Indiana at present are Democrats. So much can not be said of the county assessors. The Republicans are said to be in the majority in this office.

There was really some merit in both bills, but it is not ascertained why, if one was to be passed, they were not both passed. The argument in favor of either of the bills was that the county assessors and superintendents would come into office the same time the township officials do, and that the whole organization of assessors and school organization would be inexperienced. It was advocated that the county heads in each branch should have had two years experience when their subordinates took office.

The 1911 legislature added two years to the terms of the township assessors and the township trustees two years ago. The plea of the legislators was that these township officials should be elected in the "off" year so that their race would be

It Passes House Without Being Amended and Goes to Governor for His Signature.

ITS ROUTE A PERILOUS ONE

Senate Passes a Bill Providing Commission to Report on Labor Conditions Among Women.

The State house of representatives has passed the Gelts trading stamp bill in its original form and the measure is now ready for the governor's signature. Just before the bill passed it was discovered that the engrossed original of the bill had been altered so as to change one of the most vital provisions. Speaker Cobb later called attention to the mutilation of this bill.

The vote on the trading stamp bill was announced as 76 ayes and 15 noes. However, there was an error in the roll, as Ault, who desired to vote for the bill, was recorded against it. Putting Ault's name on the correct column would make the result 77 ayes and 14 noes. Representative O. C. Norris voted for the bill.

Van Horne called the Speaker's attention to the mutilation of the engrossed bill. In the provision which sets out that a trading stamp must have endorsed on its face its value in "lawful money of the United States," a line had been drawn through these words, and written in lead pencil above them were the words, "Goods, wares and merchandise." The latter was the standard that a majority of the house committee on Judiciary B had recommended be substituted, but by a large majority the house, on second reading of the bill, had turned down this amendment, and had adopted the minority report that the bill passed in the form in which it came from the senate.

The bill as it goes to the governor provides that every trading stamp certificate or coupon shall bear on its face its value in lawful money of the United States, and that trading stamps in lots of not less than five cents in value shall be redeemed in either cash or merchandise at the option of the holder. It has been called a "bill to regulate blue sky trading stamps."

The amendments that were sought to be made, but were defeated, provided that the stamps should bear on their face their value in goods, wares and merchandise, and that they should be redeemed in goods or cash at the option of the holder, the stamps to be worth in cash two-thirds of the merchandise value. The proposed amendments also provided for redemption in lots worth $2 or more.

The appointment of a commission by the Governor for the purpose of investigating labor conditions and working hours of women was endorsed by the senate yesterday through its passage of a bill providing for such a commission.

The bill was passed immediately after it was introduced by Senator Grube, who has championed the bill for a fifty-hour working week for women in the senate yesterday and lost.

The senate has passed the Krau bill, which provides no druggist or pharmacist will be permitted to sell any intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes, except on the written prescription of a licensed physician. Under the present law any person may buy liquor at a drug store in quantities of not less than a quart if he will sign an application stating that it is to be used for medicinal purposes. The bill passed by the senate requires that the prescription, which must be written by hand and not with a typewriter, must be kept on file for at least a year, where it shall be open at all times to inspection by officers of the law and the prosecuting attorney and his deputies.

The bill says that no prescription may be refilled or duplicated and no copy can be made. The evident purpose of the bill is to make it impossible for liquor to be obtained at a drug store except in the manner and under the strict regulatory restrictions set out in the bill. It would be illegal for any druggist to sell more than sixteen ounces of liquor on any one prescription, except that on the written application of the superintendent of a hospital in the state of Indiana, stating that such liquor is to be used for medicinal purposes in such hospital, such druggist might sell at one time as much as five quarts of liquor to the hospital.

It is provided that where liquor is sold for mechanical, pharmaceutical, scientific or sacramental purposes, the druggist must be personally acquainted with the purchaser and convinced that the liquor in question will be used for the purpose named. The druggist is required to keep a record of each such sale so made, the entry to be made at the time of the sale. It shall give the name and street of the purchaser, the kind, quantity and price of the liquor so sold, and the purpose for which it is to be used. This record also shall be open to inspection. The druggist is prohibited from making any such sale if the purchaser is a person in the habit of being intoxicated. Liquors sold by a druggist are not allowed to be drunk on the premises where sold.

Any person violating any of the provisions of the bill would be liable to a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $100 for the first offense, and for each succeeding offense the fine would be not less than $100 nor more than $200, or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days, or both. And any person obtaining liquor by misrepresentation to a druggist would be guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to the same penalties as the druggist for making the sale.

The bill specifically repeals Section 2 of the "blind tiger" law of 1907, on the same subject, and also repeals all other laws that are in conflict with the bill in so far as they do so conflict.

The present Krau bill is not the same bill that was introduced by the senator from Elkhart county. When the bill came up for passage Senator Stotsenburg offered an amendment in the shape of an entire new bill for all after the enacting clause. The bill, as it stands now, is as it was amended by Stotsenburg. He explained to the senate that it would greatly strengthen the "blind tiger" law and make it more difficult for liquor to be bought at drug stores.

The Krau bill was passed by the senate by a vote of 29 to 7. It has gone to the house and has been referred to the committee on public morals.

HENRY REES' WILL TO BE CONTESTED

YOUNGER SON GETS THE MOST

The will of the late Henry Rees will be contested says the Connersville News. The testator, who was one of the oldest and best respected citizens near Fairview in Fayette county, passed away Sunday morning. The will was probated very quickly after his death, and brief mention was made of it in the News. Error, however, was made in the statement of the provisions of the instrument, a confusing codicil having imparted a wrong impression.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Rees died the owner of about one hundred and ninety acres of land, worth $14,000 to $15,000 and of a small personal estate. The property is divided equally between the three children, George E. Rees, John L. Rees and Mrs. Exire Galaspie. The realty is all bequeathed to John L. Rees, subject to the single stipulation that the sum of $1,500 be paid by him to each of the other children, George E. Rees and Mrs. Galaspie. Thus, by the terms of the will as it stands, the son, George E. Rees and the daughter, receive each a third of the small personal estate, plus $1,500, while the remainder of the estate, representing $12,000 perhaps, goes entirely to John L. Rees, the younger son.

The instrument is said to present some striking peculiarities, which, however, will not be elucidated until the case comes to trial.

"The Blue Bird" comes back to the Murat, Indianapolis, the latter half of this week with the original spectacular production and big company from the New theatre, New York. It tells the story of the search by two small kiddies of a blue bird, the symbol of happiness which is ever elusive and the secret of which no one can ever find. It is a fairy fantasy, this creation of the poet Maeterlinck's, resting on a stamum of sound philosophy. Tyltyl and Mytyl, the two children who go forth to find the blue bird, discover it at least in the cage that hangs by the cottage window. Meantime the diamond, which Tyltyl wears in his hat and a turn of which shows to the wearer things as they really are, reveals the great poet's wonder vision of the world.

There are no stones that are not precious! there is nothing inanimate that has not a soul; even Bread, Sugar, Water, Fire, Dog and Cat attain quasi-humanity and speech. "There are no dead!" these children learn as they visit the Kingdom of the Past, solving a great mystery. Wars, Sickness and Evils are slowly losing their terrors, they find, conquered by benign Wisdom or Light. Up in the skies—the Kingdom of the Future—the unborn souls are waiting their turn to come on earth, Father Time being the trusty pilot. Such is in brief a part of the wonder-vision that Maeterlinck presents in his fairy drama and which the producers of the New theatre elaborated into a series of gorgeous stage spectacles, enhanced by music, dances, "trick" illusions and novel lighting effects. No pantomime that charmed the children of an older day is said to be comparable with the staged "Blue Birds" in its many sided beauty. New York enjoyed it for over a year, while the European productions in London, Paris, Berlin etc., have proved equally successful.

In this city, as in New York, the leading part of the boy Tyltyl is to be played by Master Barford Hamden, a noted juvenile from Sir Herbert Tree's company in London. In the cast of 100 more than a third are little folks, while among the adult principals are such well-known players as Cecil Yarr, Harry Lambert, Winifred Harris, Ethel Brandon, Alice Butler, Alida Cortelvon, Charles Hamden, Dora Davidson, John Sutherland, George Sylvester.

DENIES HE'S DEAD.

Newcastle Times: Emmet Langston, a well-known Knightstown citizen, was reported dead by the local papers on Saturday evening, but according to a wireless message from the scene of Mr. Langston's supposed transportation over the River the report of the demise is "greatly exaggerated," as the late Mark Twain once said.

CHAPTER XIX.

They Who Water With Tears.

As at last the news of John Rawn's collapse broke full and fair—disastrous enough to please even his late warmest friends, the stock markets east and west, became scenes of riot. The truth, of course, had leaked out regarding Rawn's fight in the last ditch. The newspapers swarmed upon Graystone hall, besieging any who could be found. Halsey refused to talk, and moreover, Rawn could not be found. This threw them upon their own resources, and what they did not know they imagined. Even thus, the wildest of them all could not imagine half; the shrewdest of the journalists could not get their hands on the "inside story" here. No one in or around or back of the stock exchanges could be found possessed of secret information which he was willing to impart. Throughout wild hours of hurrying, telegraphing, investigating, the papers kept up their frenzied search for the truth, and found it not, and knew they had not found it.

Halsey, one morning after a sleepless night, more than a week after Rawn's departure to New York, secured copies of each of the morning papers. He stood uncertain, in the great central room of Graystone hall, with these black and frowning messengers of fate in his hands, scarce daring to look at them. He felt some sense of definite disaster at hand. He glanced at last at one, and started as though struck. Calling a servant, he sent word to Mrs. Rawn inquiring if he might meet her at once.

She joined him presently, smiling faintly, giving him her hand, then leading him to a breakfast table on the long gallery facing the lake front, a favorite spot with her. She gave the butler orders to serve them breakfast here at once; for she now learned Halsey had neither slept nor eaten. Halsey did not learn that the same also was true of her.

They seated themselves and for the time said nothing, each gazing out over the lake. The morning was calm and beautiful. The blue lake, just dotted with little whitecap rolling waves, seemed in amiable mood, and purred gently along the sea-wall, below the green and curving terrace which ran down from the gallery front. A bird chirped here and there.

Little enough the peaceful scene reflected the feelings of these, its only human figures. Virginia Rawn was pale. Dark rings showed below her eyes. Her mouth drooped just a trifle, plaintively, in a way not usual with her. She was pale, paler than her usual clean and clear ivory. Yet she was coolly beautiful in her morning gown of light figured lawn, with its wide, flowing sleeves, showing her round white arms. Halsey, frowning, serious, felt the charm of her rise about him, overwhelm him. He knew that the hour had come for him in more ways than one; that hers, for ever, was the one face and figure and voice and presence for him, hopeless and unhappy, and doomed for ever so to remain. She was not his wife. She was the wife of another man—of his enemy; the man in all the world least like himself; the man who, by virtue of that unlikeness, had won this woman for his own. What hope for him, Charles Halsey, for whom was no place in the world?

Without much comment he placed before her the morning papers, with their glaring headlines.

"Well," said he, "it is the end."

"Yes!" said she, smiling; "I suppose now we can learn all about our earlier life and career?"

"Quite so. Here is the entire history of Mr. Rawn's career—what he did when he was a young man, where he came from, how he rose to power, how he failed and fell—it's all here. Here's the story of the International Power company—they claim it was intended as a merger of all the traction companies of the eight leading cities of the country! Bond issue one to eight billion dollars, capitalization one to two hundred billion in stocks—you can take your choice in crashed figures. Here are biographical histories of all the known and unknown stockholders. Here, Mrs. Rawn, is a picture of yourself, as well as one of Mr. Rawn and one more of the house here—a new view, I think. The photographer must have made a flash of the grounds."

She smiled as he tried to jest, following his pointing finger along the blurred, brutal headlines, shrieking their discordant, impossible and inconsistent tales. The first paper, the Forum, declared the ruin of John Rawn's fortune to be now beyond all hope of repair. Rawn himself—really at that time often in a helpless stupor in a New York hotel room—was reported to have fled the country. Halsey, his son-in-law, and Halsey's wife, who really had only denied themselves to visitors and reporters—were declared to be in hiding in some secret apartments of the great castle on the North shore, a place actually but little known to any member of the select North side society in which Rawn had been, more or less on sufferance, received. Rawn's wife was also located here, in a condition verging on insanity, according to the imagination of the writers, which, after all, was fatefully near to the truth.

Virginia Rawn smiled, and turned the pages. The next journal had little else but detailed discussion of the Rawn collapse. It also asserted the scheme of the International Power company was the most bold and rapacious fraud of the day. With journalistic vaticination it insouciantly declared that the intention of the company was to establish central distributing points for power stolen from the public's great water powers, and the retail of what the journal in the argot of the day called canned power, in cheap and portable small motors applicable to countless semi-mechanical uses, all with an end of abolishing the need for horse power and for man power alike. The result, it pointed out, would be the throwing out of work of countless thousands of laboring men by the use of electricity stolen from the people themselves. The gigantic combination already was covering the main water powers. The people's present openly had been disregarded, the people's future openly and patently had been put in the gravest of peril. The entire system of government had been laid by the heels. The name of the republic had been made a mockery. Above all, it was asserted, the most intimate intent of the International Power company had been the throttling of the labor unions—against which John Rawn was known to be personally bitterly opposed—the very essence and soul of the conspiracy having been this device whose aim was to wipe out the need of unskilled labor, and to make useless and unpaid the power of human brawn.

Following these assertions—which after all were not in the least bad journalism, however good or bad had been the design of International Power—the same journal exultantly declared that labor need not yet despair, for that the gigantic conspiracy now had fallen in ruins; its leader had abdicated and fled, and his ill-gotten gains had been dissipated in his last desperate attempt to save his holdings in other stocks. In his ultimate fight he had surrendered the control of the International, so long and desperately held in his ownership, and now was ousted from the presidency, other managers being left in charge of the wreck of a desperate marauder's attempt to throttle a republic and to rule a country. And so forth, to many extra pages, all deliciously explicit, and wondrous welcome alike to those who purchase and those who purvey the news.

The chronicle of all this was accompanied in this journal not only with pictures of Graystone hall, but of the abandoned factory of the International Power company; also with portraits of Rawn and his wife and of Charles Halsey, late superintendent of the company; as well as those of Jim Sullivan, the foreman, Ann Sullivan, his wife, and other labor leaders sometimes concerned about the mysterious factory which had housed the desperate secret of International Power. As it chanced, the portraits of Ann Sullivan and Virginia Rawn had been exchanged, so that the beautiful Mrs. Rawn appeared as a hard-featured Irish woman of more than middle age; whereas Mrs. Sullivan, wife of the well-known labor leader, presented a somewhat distinguished figure in her eminently handsome gown and obviously valuable jewels.

Virginia Rawn looked calmly, smilingly, over these and many other varying details of these closing scenes in her career. "Very well," said she, pointing to the likeness accredited to her name, "this is the last time my portrait will appear in print, I suppose. What difference does it make? The older and uglier I am, the better the story! Perhaps for once Mrs. Sullivan, when she sees her picture—will think her dreams have come true! Maybe she's dreamed—I know I did; and I know what I am. The names and pictures are right, just as they are. She wins, not I."

"But yes, I suppose this is the end of it all, as you say," she added wearily, almost indifferently. "Of course, we've known it was coming. I suppose there was nothing else could come of it all."

Halsey at first could make no answer except to drop his face in his hands. A half groan escaped him, in spite of his attempt to rival her courage or her indifference, whichever it might be.

"I've done this," he said at last; "I've brought all this on you. It's all my fault, and it's too late now for me to help it. We couldn't straighten out things in the business now, even if I went back to work. It's too late. I've ruined you, Mrs. Rawn."

"Yes, that's plain," she answered quietly. "But isn't this just what you wanted? Haven't you always resented the success of others, deprecated the wish of some men to get money at any cost? Aren't you a Socialist at heart? Didn't you want this—just this?"

"Want it? No! How could I want anything which meant harm for you? If only you had come to me and asked me to go back—asked me to get into line!"

"You'd have done it, wouldn't you, Charley—for me?" She smiled at him, her small, white teeth showing. But back of her smile he felt the pulse of a mind.

"I don't know—how could I have helped it?"

"Then you'd have forgotten all your loyalty to those people over there? You'd have forgotten all about the rights of man of which you told me, and your devotion to the principles of this republic of which you talked—is that true? You'd have forgotten all, everything, for me?"

"Yes, I would!" He looked her fair in the eye, truthfully. "I know that, now—I didn't know it then, but I do now. Yes, I would. Just as I told him—Mr. Rawn."

"You told him, what?"

"Why, that we all have our price. I suppose I had mine."

"So you'd have done that if I had asked you?"

"Then in God's name why did you not ask me? At least, I'd have saved you this!" He smote on the paper with his clenched fist. "Why didn't you ask me to save you this humiliation?"

"I did not, because I knew all along what you'd do if I did ask you."

Silence fell between them now. "Why didn't you?" he once more demanded, half-whispering. "You'd already won. You'd have won me—my principles—my honor."

"Because I did not want to win!" she answered sharply.

"Win what?"

"I was sent to bring you into camp, to get you, Charley. I did not want to—I did not! I was afraid I would!"

"I don't think I quite understand."

His face was white, his voice low and clear, his eye full on hers.

"I was sent out for you, Charley—by my own husband! You know it, we both knew it. I suppose he's been waiting somewhere for me to get word to him that I had done what I was told to do—that I had got you in hand, willing to renounce everything that you held good in your own life. Well, it's too late, now! I'm glad!"

"He sent you out after me—With what restrictions?"

"None. He didn't care how. He told me he didn't. That's why I've been keeping away from you. I was afraid I'd win—I was afraid I'd save all this."

She nodded her head, including the splendors of the mansion house, its view of the lake, all the gracious, delicate ministries of wealth.

"Good God!" Halsey broke out. "The man who would do that is not worth a woman's second thought."

"Of course not. And the woman who would do that—?"

"Don't ask me about that; I can't think. All I know is that if you had asked me to do anything in the world, I think I'd have said yes."

"For me?"

"Yes, for you. It's the truth. It's all out, at last! There's the whole story now of John Rawn—all of it, in black and white! Here's all my story—go you. You must have known—"

AMERICAN PRISONERS FREED

Several Men From United States Escape In Exodus From Mexican Prison.

Arrivals recently at Laredo, Tex., from the City of Mexico say that hundreds of the 4,000 convicts who were released from Belem prison by the rebels during the first outbreak joined the Diaz standard.

Besides the 4,000 Mexicans who were confined therein the prison held about twenty-five foreigners.

Among the foreign prisoners who were liberated were George I. Ham, a Canadian, former president of the United States Banking company of the City of Mexico, who was convicted of wrecking that institution and under sentence of twelve years. Others were Robert Crump, an American and former president of the Federal bank, which failed a few years ago; Benjamin Wilson, an American, held on demand of the United States government, pending extradition, to answer charges of fraud, which he is alleged to have committed in Oklahoma, and Larry Martin, who shot and killed Dr. Clarke in the City of Mexico nearly two years ago.

Oriental Republic to Order Machines From French Makers.

The president of the Chinese republic, on the suggestion of his French military adviser, Major Brissaud Desmilles, has decided upon the creation of an aerial fleet, the organization of which will be entrusted to French officers.

All Chinese staff officers, it was announced in Paris recently, will be required to pass through the aviation school, either as pilots or observers, and a series of competitions, to which all aeroplane constructors will be invited to send machines, will be held in Peking in 1914.

The Chinese government, it is said, is anxious to have a great fleet of aeroplanes, which will be used for police work in time of peace.

Senate Democrats Make Him Caucus Chairman.

A VICTORY FOR PROGRESSIVES

Result of Party Conference Proved That With Its Accession to Power in the Senate the Democratic Party Also Had Become Progressive, Old Wheel Horses Being Retired by Those of Swifter Pace.

Washington, March 6.—Succeeding Senator Thomas F. Martin of Virginia, who withdrew from the race a few days ago when it became apparent that he could not win, Senator John Worth Kern of Indiana was elected Democratic caucus chairman. Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada was chosen vice chairman and Senator Willard Saulsbury of Delaware was elected secretary. The caucus was harmonious. Senator Kern was authorized to appoint a steering committee of nine members, of which he is to be the ex-officio chairman.

Republicans in their party conference chose Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire as chairman and Senator Kenyon of Iowa as secretary.

The result of the party conference proved that simultaneously with its accession to power in the senate the Democratic party had also become progressive. Senator Kern, the new chairman, has been but two years in that body, but he has been one of the most progressive of the Democratic leaders and on a number of occasions has chafed under the leadership of his party in that body. His selection broke the ancient rule of seniority in the senate. In choosing a vice chairman the Democrats again overlooked the conservatives in their party. Mr. Newlands has been one of the most progressive men on the Democratic side. The secretary also is from the new crop of senators and probably one of the most progressive of them.

It is evident that the Democratic leadership in the senate will be exemplified by men like Senator Kern, Senator Hoke Smith, Senator Gore and the younger element. On the Republican side, for sixteen years the scene of activity incident to party control, everything was as silent as a churchyard at midnight. There are not many new faces on the Republican side.

The Democrats elected to the house in the new congress perfected organization at their caucus and despite threats that were made by the "insurgents," Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama was named to succeed himself as leader. The Clark Underwood program was put through without a dissenting vote. Champ Clark was renominated to succeed himself as speaker.

Vice President Marshall got through his first day as presiding officer of the senate without any embarrassment. At his elbow was the secretary of the senate, Mr. Bennett, who coached him. Mr. Marshall does not know all the senators by sight yet, but he said today he hoped to get them in his mind's eye in a short time.

LLOYD-GEORGE URGES NEED OF HELPING ENGLAND'S POOR

He Would Lighten Plowman's Lot by Removing Great Abuses.

"The foremost task of Liberalism in the near future is the regeneration of rural life—the emancipation of the land of this country from the paralyzing grip of a rusty, effete and unprofitable system."

David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer of England, made this momentous declaration in London recently at the annual meeting of the National Liberal club. The land question has been Mr. Lloyd-George's hobby, and the Conservatives have accused him of being ambitious to introduce the Henry George system of taxation in Great Britain.

Recently they have been asserting that the cabinet has sidetracked his scheme, but the recent speech by the chancellor of the exchequer indicates that the government soon will grapple with perhaps the greatest attempt in its extensive program of social reforms.

Speaking of the agricultural laborers, the chancellor said:

"Our reports prove conclusively that there are hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of men, women and children living under conditions with regard to wages, housing and the rest of labor conditions who ought to make this great empire hang its head with shame."

WILSON'S FIRST DAY ON THE JOB

New President Gives Office Seekers a Jolt.

NO PERSONAL APPLICATIONS

Mr. Wilson Gives It Out Pointblank That He Will Not Be Distracted From the Duties in Hand by the Importunities of Pap Hunters, Whom He Directs to Take Up Their Cases With Department Heads.

Washington, March 6.—Serving notice that he has shifted the burden of patronage distribution from his shoulders to those of the members of his cabinet, was Woodrow Wilson's first important act as president.

This statement by the new president, which was only one of several developments which indicated the presence of a new regime and new methods at the White House, follows: "The president regrets that he is obliged to announce that he deems it his duty to decline to see applicants for office in person except when he himself invites the interview. It is his purpose and desire to devote his attention very earnestly and very constantly to the business of the government and the large questions of policy affecting the whole nation, and he knows from his experience as governor of New Jersey—where it fell to him to make innumerable appointments—that the greater part both of his time and of his energy will be spent in personal interviews with candidates unless he sets an invariable rule in the matter. It is his intention to deal with appointments through the heads of the several executive departments."

It is hard to say whether the horde of office-seekers that has already invaded Washington, or members of congress, were jarred the harder by President Wilson's patronage statement. It was apparent immediately that his declaration of freedom meant that the cabinet officers under his administration will wield a much more powerful arm than in previous years.

Mr. Wilson got to the executive offices in the morning just in time to witness the swearing in of his private secretary.

The first business taken up by the new president was dictating letters to retiring cabinet members and their assistant secretaries, accepting their resignations. Charles R. Crane of Chicago, who has been mentioned for a diplomatic post, was the first visitor, and a few minutes later the members of Mr. Wilson's cabinet began to troop in for their first meeting. The cabinet was in session only about an hour, and just as the members were leaving Uncle Joe Cannon sauntered in to pay his respects. Uncle Joe was on a round of all the departments in Washington saying farewells before retiring from public life.

Mr. Wilson had cleared his desk at about 12:30 and practically the entire afternoon was devoted to receiving visitors. Late in the afternoon the new president went for a long auto ride and last night he spent quietly in the White House.

The Cabinet Takes Office.

The Democratic administration of the great executive departments of the government got under way in the afternoon with the qualification of all but two of President Wilson's advisers as executive officers of the United States. Throughout the department buildings there were little inaugurations as President Wilson's appointees took the oath of office for their respective positions.

President Wilson sent the names of his cabinet officers to the senate shortly after noon, so that when the senate convened at 2 o'clock it required but a few minutes for the confirmation of all on the list.

Secretary of State Bryan took the oath of office soon after 4 o'clock in the office vacated by P. C. Knox, who left at once for Palm Beach. Later in the day it was Mr. Bryan's task to countersign the commissions of his colleagues in the cabinet, brief personal sketches of whom follow:

LOOK YEARS YOUNGER! GRAY HAIR DARKENED BEAUTIFULLY WITH SAGE.

Says Sage and Sulphur Will Stop Falling Hair and Cure Dandruff.

Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and it surely helps folks appear years younger.

It will be recalled Scott Tarplee, son of the local man, was shot by a Birmingham policeman without cause about two years ago. The officer was tried and found not guilty. FEW FARMERS ARE SOWING OATS CROP

It is Placed on Top of Ground and Alternate Freezing and Thawing Covers Seed With Earth.

WHEAT OUTLOOK GOOD

A great many farmers have already begun to sow oats but all of the grain, so far as is known, has been sown on top of the ground. This method is practiced considerably, especially on the clay lands of the county, where the alternate freezing and thawing works the seed into the ground and thus covers it. It is said this method of seeding is not very successfully practiced on the sand lands of the county. The main point in favor of sowing the oats on top of the ground, or on faith, as some call it, is the fact that they may be sown much earlier than would otherwise be possible, a thing which is very necessary in order to raise a full crop.

The seeding of clover seed is already going on at full blast, and some farmers have sown the seed even earlier than this date. When the clover seed is sown early it works itself into the ground before the weather gets warm enough to sprout it. A large number of farmers, however, practice the method of seeding clover as late as April and then run a light harrow over the ground in order to cover the seed. Farmers say the outlook for a wheat crop in this country was never better than at present. The prospect for other crops on the farm look good.

IS NO BONUS OR WATERED STOCK

would be doubled in value, because stock value is estimated by its earning power. As the output would increase, so would the dividends, and correspondingly so, the value of the stock.

It is believed the industry would eventually become one of the biggest in Indiana. At the beginning the factory would employ fifty men, and the weekly payroll would amount to from $2,500 to $3,000. It is considered fair and conservative to estimate that eighty per cent of this weekly payroll would circulate in local channels. If plans do not miscarry, the factory will be ready to supply the trade with Ideal corn husking machines in 1914. An investment in the new organization is not considered a speculation because no misrepresentations are made and everything is open and above boards.

TIME FOR MORTGAGE EXEMPTION IS HERE

Property Owners Who Want Reduction in Assessment May File Affidavits by May 1.

$700 IS LIMIT OF EXEMPTION

The time has arrived for the filing of mortgage deduction affidavits. Under the law governing this practice such affidavits must be filed between the first of March and first of May. They may be sworn to before any notary and a number of the local notaries make a business of preparing these affidavits during the "open season."

After such affidavits are prepared they have to be filed with the county auditor. The notaries usually wait until near the first of May, when they take their affidavits to the auditor in a bunch and file them.

The mortgage exemption law allows people, who have mortgage property to secure a reduction in their assessment. No reduction of more than $700 is allowed.
